All's quiet as state celebrates new millennium

A backpack left on North Main Street across from the State House raised concerns yesterday that it might contain a bomb. It didn't. And the police returned the bag to its owner.

Two days after a letter reached the governor's office warning a bomb would disrupt First Night activities somewhere in the state, the city remained calm into the carly evening as families began celebrating the new millennium.

"People are buying the buttons They're coming out in droves. There's police presence on the streets and the weather is holding out Attendance has been full at the performances," said Catherine Wright, spokeswoman for oday's "Century Edition" of the Monitor includes a special pullout section taking one last fun look back at New Hampshire in Inside, you'll find a seven-page timeline chronicling important and offbeat events in the state over the last 100 years.

There is also an index called The Century in Statistics, comparing New Hampshire life at the beginning of the 1900s (our population was just 410,938 back then, and we produced 185,000 gallons of maple syrup) with today (1.2 million people but just 61,000 gallons of syrup).

On the first page of the section you'll find an interview with Dean Williamson of Concord, who has lived through nearly the entire cen-tury, and a chat with Concord-area residents about what they'd leave to the future in a New Hampshire time capsule.

But the heart of the issue is a

The issue includes essays by Monitor readers that capture the mood and events of the last 100 years. One woman, for instance, writes about watching the original Mount Washington steamship cruise Lake Winnipesaukee. One man describes his parents feeding hobos at their West Street apartment during the Depression.

We've also included reprints of several items from the Monitor over the last 100 years. They include a column written after the space shuttle Challenger exploded and an editorial called "Time To Buy" - sound advice after the stock market crash of 1929!

All the special material means we've moved around some of the Monitor's regular features.

President Yeltsin announces resignation

Putin, prime minister, will take over

By BARRY RENFREW The Associated Press

MOSCOW - Pleading for forgiveness, Boris Yeltsin resigned yesterday as president, clearing the way for his hand-picked successor to take Russia into a new age and fix the mistakes he admitted having made through eight chaotic years.

Prime Minister Vladimir Putin. the country's most popular politician, took control of the government and will serve as acting president until elections are held in 90 days just two weeks after his supporters scored a surprise triumph in parliamentary elections.

One of Putin's first acts was to sign a grant of immunity to Yeltsin. inviting speculation that a deal had been made to entice Yeltsin into early retirement.

Looking grim and emotional, Yeltsin said he was stepping down immediately to give Putin the best chance of winning the presidential elections. Putin, already the top candidate to replace Yeltsin, now has a huge advantage that his rivals probably won't be able to counter.

"I am stepping down ahead of Yeltsin said during an address on state television, speaking in front of a gaily decorated New Year's tree and a blue, red and white Russian flag with a golden Russian

"I understand that I must do it, and Russia must enter the new millennium with new politicians, with new faces, with new intelligent, strong, energetic people, and we who have been in power for many years must go," he said, making a surprise announcement during what was supposed to be a New Year's address.

Yeltsin, who has ruled Russia with a strong hand since 1991 and was due to step down in June, said he deeply regretted not meeting people's expectations in the post-Soviet

"I want to beg forgiveness for your dreams that never came true. And also I would like to beg forgiveness for not having justified your hopes," said Yeltsin, who rarely admits errors. "I beg your forgiveness for having failed to jump in one

leap from the gray, stagnant, totali-tarian past to the light, rich and civilized future

Putin, a former KGB officer. quickly assumed control of the government and said he would continue as prime minister. Yeltsin turned over to Putin the so-called nuclear suitcase controlling Russia's nuclear arsenal and the pen he used to sign key measures.

The transition of power is likely to be smooth, with no destabilizing effects. Russia has a decade of democratic elections under its belt. and political parties were already preparing for the presidential vote.

In Washington, President Clinton paid tribute to Yeltsin for dismantling the communist system and putting a democratic structure in

"I liked him because he was always forthright with me," Clinton said. "He always did exactly what he said he would do. And he was willing to take chances to try to improve our relationship

Putin quickly signed a decree giving Yeltsin immunity from criminal prosecution, a lifetime pension and a government country home, bodyguards and medical care for him and

But while the immunity will be seen by some as a key reason for Yeltsin's decision, the deal did not include his family, which has been linked to corruption allegations in recent months. Previous prime ministers, who also had their eye on the presidency, had talked of such a deal for Yeltsin, who is also concerned about Communist efforts to jail him for breaking up the Soviet Union.

The timing of Yeltsin's resignation probably had more to do with parliamentary elections less than two weeks ago, in which pro-Putin centrist parties did unexpectedly well in parliamentary elections. With the backing of the state media and showing strength in public opinion polls, Putin has a huge advantage in the presidential election, expected to be held on March 26

Putin's confident handling of the war in Chechnya and no-nonsense manner appeals to many Russians, who want take-charge leadership to tackle the nation's enormous economic, political and social prob-an Indian Airlines plane were safely released yesterday in exchange for India's freeing of three Islamic insurgents.

The unidentified hijackers and the former prisoners surrendered to Afghanistan officials and were taken off the plane into Taliban custody, still wearing ski masks, and were given 10 hours to leave the country. One unarmed Taliban official accompanied them as a "hostage" to guarantee their safety, as they were driven to various consulates in Kandahar to seek asylum.

Foreign diplomats escorted all the hostages off the stranded jet after the 15-minute turnover. The passengers – who diplomats said appeared to be in good condition – included more than 100 Indian citizens and one elderly American woman. They were driven to another waiting plana and flown immediately to New Delhi. Some looked weary, but others grinned as they wobbled down the steps of two planes that returned them from southern Afghanistan. One man stooped down and kissed the ground.

"We are more than happy that the authorities of the Islamic emirate of Afghanistan were able to tackle this humanitarian crisis and release the hostages on board," Afghan Foreign Minister Wakil Ahmad Muttawakil told reporters yesterday. "We are happy that the passengers, crew and aircraft were safely handed over to the government of India."

Jaswant Singh, India's foreign minister, who turned the prisoners over to the Taliban regime, spoke briefly at Muttawakil's side in the airport before accompanying the freed passengers to New Delhi. He expressed India's "gratitude and indebtedness" to the Taliban government, especially "to his excellence personally," for Muttawakil and the Afghan officials' "support and cooperation" in ending the crisis peacefully.

India, a largely Hindu country, does not officially recognize the radical Islamic government that rules most of Afghanistan.

Muttawakil also repeatedly praised singh and said he hord linds would respect the "historic service" his government had performed in the crisis. But he denied that his government, long isolated abroad for abusing human rights and formenting terrorism, was now hoping to be recognized by India and other countries.

"This has nothing to do with political recognition." he told reporters. "It depends on India what they think or say What we did was not for recognition or anything else. It was just for a humanitarian cause."

Despite the jubilant relief and diplomatic cordiality, the Indian government was expected to face some domestic criticasm for giving in to some of the hijackers' demands and releasing the insurgents. On the other hand, the Indian hostages' families had strongly pressured the government to end the crisis, even if that meant turning over some prisoners.

"From the beginning, our primary concern was to deter the hijackers and safer return all passengers and crew," Singh said last night. "India fights against such crimnal actions that are inhuman beyond description, and that fight shall continue."

The peaceful solution to the crisis ended several days of mounting tension, during which the hijackers reportedly threatened to start shooting passengers if their demands were not met. On Thursday, heavy weapons and Taliban commando forces were sent to surround the plane, and Taliban authorities threatened to storm the aircraft if any passengers were harmed.

"The real credit goes to intelligence, to those who used their brains in the proper way and context, especially the Taliban," said Erick de Mul, the chief United Nations representative in Afghanistan who had been assisting during the crisis. "This was an incredible headache for them, but they played a very important role and made it absolutely clear they would go into action if anything happened to the passengers."

Watergate figure Richardson is dead at 79

He resigned when Nixon told him to fire Cox

By BART BARNES The Washington Post

Elliot Richardson, 79, who shocked the nation and stunned the Republican Party in 1973 by resigning as U.S. attorney general when directed by President Richard M. Nixon to fire the special prosecutor investigating the Watergate break-in and subsequent cover up, died of a cerebral hemorrhage yesterday at a hospital in Richardson, a lifelong Republican, had earlier served in the Nixon Administration as secretary of health, education and welfare, secretary of defense and under secretary of state.

During the presidency of Gerald Ford he was ambassador to Great Britain and secretary of commerce. In the 1960s he was attorney general of Massachusetts, where he had also served as U.S. attorney and lieutenant governor.

But the defining moment of his career and the singular act for which he was best remembered was his decision to resign in October of 1973 rather than comply with Nixon's order to fire Archibald Cox, the special prosecutor who was investigating the June 1972 break-in at the Democratic National Committee offices at the Watergate building in Washington. The break-in and subsequent White House cover up ultimately led to Nixon's resignation in August of 1974.

In refusing to obey the presidential directive, Richardson helped precipitate a crisis of confidence in the government and he increased the momentum of the unraveling Watergate scandal. He acquired a national reputation as man of integrity who put principle ahead of partisan polities

But, in fact, he was deeply troubled by his decision to quit, friends said, because he also felt he owed a debt of loyalty and allegiance to the president who had appointed him to three cabinet level positions. He would characterize the episode in later years as "my brief period of notoricty"

Named U.S. attorney general in April of 1973 to oversee the Watergate investigation and restore the public's shaken confidence in the Department of Justice, Richardson had been on the job only six months when on Saturday, Oct. 20, the White House ordered him to fire Cox, the former solicitor general and Harvard law professor whom he'd hired as Watergate special prosecutor.

This period had already been one of the most tempestuous in the history of the Republic.

The Watergate scandal was running at full throttle. Televised hearings on Capitol Hill that summer brought a stream of revelations of burglary, wiretaps, lies, duplicity and criminality at the highest levels of government.

Russian forces push offensive on capital

GROZNY, Russia - Russian tanks in hills on the edge of Chechnya's capital blasted rapid-fire barrages into the city yesterday, working to drive out rebels as Russian ground forces gingerly tried to advance toward the city center.

The Russian military claimed to have broken through the rebels' first line of defense in the capital, Grozny, and to have taken control of the Staropromyslovsky neighborhood, about two miles from the city's center. But there were no signs that Russian forces were making quick

A rebel leader said his fighters were standing firm.

"Federal troops have not advanced by a single meter," said Khamzat Gilavey, commander of the units defending Grozny.

A line of about 25 tanks in the hills above Staropromyslovsky fired into the city one after another in rapid succession. Meanwhile, civilians cowered in low-ceiling basements where they have hidden for weeks with meager food supplies. One family showed a reporter a larder bare of anything other than a jar of fruit.

The Pentagon said vesterday that Russia launched three Scud missiles into Chechnya. The missiles were monitored as part of the U.S-Russia joint surveillance of any activity that might be related to the year 2000 computer glitch, but U.S. Undersecretary of State Thomas Pickering said the launches were not Y2K-related.

There had been no previous reports of Russia using such heavy weaponry in Chechnya. A duty officer at Russia's Defense Ministry said he had no information about the report and no one answered at Russia's Strategic Missile Forces or Russian Air Defense offices.

Russia attacked Chechnya in September, aiming to wipe out militants who invaded neighboring Dagestan this summer. Islamic militants also are blamed for a series of apartment explosions that killed some 300 people in Russia.

TAMPA, Fla. - A hotel housekeeper was charged yesterday with killing four co-workers in a crowded hotel, then shooting a fifth person to death as he tried to escape

Silvio Izquierdo-Leyva, 36, faced five counts of first-degree murder and three counts of armed carjacking during an initial hearing before Hillsborough County Circuit Court Judge Cynthia Holloway

The hotel rampage ended a year marred by deady workplace and school shootings, including nine people killed in an Atlanta stock brokerage in July and 15 killed in the halls of Denver's Columbine High

Izquierdo-Leyva didn't speak to investigators after his arrest Thursday and the police are still unsure of a motive. Police Chief Bennie Izquierdo-Leyva was arrested shortly after he opened fire in the Radisson Bay Harbor Inn and struck seven people: two outside the front entrance, two in the lobby, one in another area, one by the pool and one in a restaurant.

Of the three people who were wounded, one remained in critical condition and another in serious condition yesterday. The third was treated and released Thursday.

The shootings occurred when the hotel, east of the city's airport, was packed with football fans in town for the New Year's Day Outback Bowl between Purdue and Georgia.

The St. Petersburg Times yesterday quoted a niece, Liza Izquierdo, as saving her uncle had returned just last month from a three-week visit to his native Cuba, where he had begun a year of studies to become a Santero, a priest in the Santeria faith.

Free shipping in Web debate

LOS ANGELES - Online retailers that promised free shipping to lure holiday shoppers to Web sites may have a hard time turning back

Promotional offers of free shipping helped drive record sales for ecommerce during the Christmas season. But the trend is an expensive one that could create problems for Web-based retailers, a study found.

Free shipping is a costly promotion for snagging customers," according to a Forrester Research study released Thursday. "But since retailers have started down this path, they will have a tough time turning back because consumers take shipping costs seriously.

Holiday shopping on the Internet grew 300 percent this year, generating an estimated $10 billion to $11 billion in sales. And for many shoppers, the prospect of free delivery apparently was a factor. In a separate Forrester survey of 5,831 online shoppers, 82 percent said they took shipping costs into consideration when deciding whether to buy online.

They may think about it even more in the future.

So far, e-commerce has been dominated by small, relatively light products such as books and CDs. That will begin to change in 2000, when computers and other bulky consumer electronics products will account for 55 percent of sales, or $21 billion. For these products, shipping costs will be higher, and of greater concern to buyers.

And as the number of online shoppers grows, it will include more value-conscious shoppers from lower income groups, the study said. New York

Next item on auction block: a mastodon

The Associated Press

PINE VALLEY, N.Y. - The next item up for bid on the eBay auction block will be an 11,000-year-old mastodon skeleton. Do I hear $4.5 million?

There were no takers for John Gilbert's find. It was just as well.

mastodon was Gilbert's unearthed in September by a contractor who was digging a pond in the back of Gilbert's house, located halfway between Elmira and Watkins Glen in Chemung County.

"He came back and said, 'I got a dinosaur here. Come and look in the back of my truck," said Gilbert, a retired air traffic control supervi-

"I went out and there's this huge hip bone. We have horses, and I knew it wasn't a horse." Gilbert said.

After months of excavation and analysis by Cornell University paleontologists, it was determined that Gilbert had found a mastodon, a heavily built elephant-like mammal with long tusks that became extinct

Paleontologist John Chiment said his team found about 200 of the mastodon's 220 bones, one of the more complete skeletons ever discovered.

Gilbert said he let friends talk him into putting the skeleton up for auction on eBay. By asking an extravagant sum, they figured he might entice some rich private collector. Gilbert said he actually plans to sell the bones to a museum or university. Cornell is expected to

"This is something that shouldn't be hoarded." Gilbert said. "It should be out where people can see

It used to be that prehistoric skeletons were typically donated to a museum or local historical society, said Gay Malin, who does conservation and restoration for the New York State Museum in Albany.

Now, private collectors and international museums - with the help of old-fashioned and online auctions - have created a new marketplace for old bones and fossils.

U.S. relinquishes control of Panama Canal

Handover remained controversial up to final ceremony

By JUANITA DARLING Los Angeles Times

PANAMA CITY, Panama — The United States turned over control of the Panama Canal to this Central American nation yesterday, with drawing from a relationship that symbolized the best and the worst of the U.S. role in Latin America during the 20th century.

"The canal is ours," Panamanian President Mireya Moscoso exclaimed, minutes before hoisting her nation's flag over the canal administration building.

As the banner rose, thousands of balloons were released and scores of Panamanians, many waving flags, jubilantly broke through security cordons and charged up the hill toward the building, ignoring a tropical downpour

As head of the U.S. delegation to the ceremony, Army Secretary Louis Caldera, chairman of the joint U.S. Panamanian commission that had overseen the waterway's administration, said the U.S. presence here had come to conflict with American principles

"The United States could not aspire to be a good neighbor to Latin America and continue occupying and dividing the territory of a country considered a friend," he said.

Moscoso and Caldera spoke at a noon ceremony ending a century of American domination that began when the U.S. engineered Panama's separation from Colombia, leaving this country independent but not wholly sovereign.

While other Latin American nations have complained of the more than a dozen U.S. invasions in the region, the American presence in Panama has been continuous and decisive. Up to 30,000 U.S. soldiers and well-paid civilians have at times lived in the former Canal Zone, creating a dependency that even the most sovereign minded Panamanians compare to a prolonged adolescence. Vanquishing malaria and mudslides, the United States built, ran and protected the 51-mile-long waterway that opened in 1914. The waterway united the Caribbean Sea and the Pacific Ocean but divided this nation of 2.5 million people in half. For most of this century, Panamanians could not enter a 10-milewide enclave of U.S. military bases and canal workers' housing in the middle of their country.

It has been a uniquely American form of colonialsm: It was never called that by name, but it left influences that have determined the demographics, economy and social structure of Panama.

As it ended, U.S. officials seemed eager to finish the chapter as quickly and quietly as possible. In the 22 years since President Carter negotiated a treaty with populist leader Gen. Omar Torrijos to gradually relinguish control of the canal to Panama. U.S. conservatives have protested the give-away as a sign of weakness. The withdrawal has remained so controversial that no Cabinet level U.S. official attended yesterday's ceremony or a special symbolic international gathering two weeks ago. The U.S. flag was removed from the canal administra tion offices for the last time at sunset Thursday

GENEVA - A 23-year-old American has been rescued after being trapped for nearly a week on a Swiss mountain, where he sought shelter under a rock from subzero temperatures and 124 mph wind gusts.

Matt Sanders of Austin, Texas, said yesterday a warm sleeping bag saved his life while he was snowbound by one of Europe's worst storms this century. Sanders, who was rescued late Thursday, astounded Alpine experts "I have never heard of someone surviving that long in such conditions," Markus Rieder, spokesman for the Valais cantonal (state) police. 'It was nearly seven days.

"I may lose a couple of the toes, but overall it looks like I may be very lucky," Sanders told The Associated Press from his hospital bed in Bern,

Switzerland. Sanders said he set off before Eve from Zer-

The police said in addition to being warmly dressed, he had ample trail food in his pack.

My biggest mistake was to overestimate my abilities to get through the snow quickly," he said. "I didn't make it quite as far as I hoped. I decided to make camp under a rock in a kind of semi-cave.

The storm struck during the night. Winds reached 124 mph and temperatures dove to 22 degrees below zero, Sanders said.

'That's what I encountered for about 48 hours. I had a sleeping bag, a very good sleeping bag made by the North Face company, and all I did was hunker down in that and pull it over my head and keep my body heat in there and keep under my

Monday the weather Rν improved.

"At this point my feet were frostbitten really badly and it was very difficult to walk," Sanders said. "But I felt I had to get a little bit higher in elevation so I could be more visible searchers had given up. Even his mother, Annetta Alms of Springfield, Ill., had accepted that he must be dead. But she asked the rescuers to go out one last time to look for his remains so she could take them home with her.

There was a break in the weather, and the helicopter was able to fly close to the mountain.

"It was very overwhelming," said Sanders, who turned 23 on Thursday. "I jumped up out of my sleeping bag and ran the best I could on frozen feet, waving my arms in the

The rescuers were incredulous. "Suddenly, at an elevation of about 3,000 meters in the area of the Trifti Saddle, we saw a red cloth moving," said a statement from Air-Zermatt. "That which no one thought possible was true. It really was the missing American.

Sanders said he hopes to be able to resume hiking, though he will likely stay away from high-altitude climbing for a while in the wake of his tumultuous experience.

Dow ends year on a high note

Stocks ended a blockbuster year by setting a full slate of records yesterday. A rally that capped an unprecedented fifth straight year of double-digit gains gathered momentum amid growing confidence that the Year 2000 will cause no major troubles in the world's financial markets.

The Dow Jones industrial average rose 44.26 to close at 11,497,12. The previous record of 11.484.66 was set Wednesday.

Broader stock indicators also climbed to new highs in the quiet abbreviated New Year's Eve session which ended at 1

The Nasdaq composite index rose 32.44 to 4.069.31 and the Standard & Poor's 500 rose 4.78 to 1,469.25. The Russell 2000, a small-company index that slumped badly for most of the year, continued its resurgence. rising 8.16 to close at a record 504.75

The string of new highs ended a remarkable year on Wall Street, which saw stock market indicators defy all predictions of modest, single-digit returns. Gains for the year came to 25.2 percent for the Dow, 85.6 percent for Nasdaq and 19.5 percent for

"It was nearly seven days.

"I may lose a couple of the toes, but overall it looks like I may be very lucky." Sanders told The Associated Press from his hospital bed in Bern. Switzerland.

Sanders said he set off before dawn on Christmas Eve from Zermatt on the famed Matterhorn to make a one-day hike through the snow. He was en route to a gondola station, where he expected to be able to ride back down before the had weather hit.

A student at Stephen F. Austin State University in Texas, Sanders said he had extensive experience at trail hiking and was well-prepared.

rnck Monday the weather By improved.

"At this point my feet were frostbitten really badly and it was very difficult to walk," Sanders said. "But I felt I had to get a little bit higher in elevation so I could be more visible to a passing helicopter, which I felt at that point was my only way of getting out of there.

Sanders climbed about 200 feet up the mountain to another ridge. But the wind continued, preventing search helicopters from getting close enough for the pilots to see him waving frantically.

By Thursday, Sanders said.

was the missing American. Sanders said he hopes to be able to resume hiking, though he will likely stay away from high-altitude climbing for a while in the wake of his tumultuous experience.

"I had huge fluctuations of what I was feeling, from great optimism when the helicopters were flying to dramatic lows when the sun set and I knew I had to stay another night up there." he said.

He said he also had religious thoughts.

"I don't think you can go through that without having some sort of spiritual movement at all. Of course I did," he said.

Restaurant under investigation

LACONIA - The police and liquor authorities say a Weirs Beach restaurant hosted nude dancing and served alcohol to minors.

The Laconia Police received a complaint that on Dec. 19 there was contact between a person and a nude dancer at the Christmas Island Restaurant and Lounge, said Sgt. John MacLennan. The police say that at least one dancer was 17 years old and had been served alcohol by people working in the lounge The police said several other minors were also served alcohol

It is unclear whether the nude dancing was at a private function. "It's illegal to dance naked in the city of Laconia, period," MacLennan said

The State Liquor Commission has cited the owner of the restaurant with eight violations of state

The police are considering charges that could include contributing to the delinquency of a minor. sexual assault and providing alcohol to minors. Some patrons, dancers and restaurant workers may also be charged, MacLennan said.

Reached last night, the restaurant's manager said the allegations were false and that nothing had occurred at the restaurant. He declined to give his

Computers for schools stolen

A man stole 20 computers refurbished by state prisoners for Hillsboro-Deering High School by posing as a representative of the school district, prison officials said

State prison inmates refurbish older computers, donated by private businesses, and give them to schools as part of a state program. The program is also intended to teach the prisoners useful work

The man showed up at the prison warehouse on Dec. 15 and claimed to be a Hillsboro-Deering official, said Mark Wefers, head of internal affairs at the prison. "He managed to acquire about 20 desktop personal computers with an estimated value of $20,000," Wefers said.

The scam was found out two days later, he said. when the real school officials showed up looking for their computers

The computers were supposed to be wired into high school classrooms over school vacation, "Now they don't have them," Wefers said

MERRIMACK - David and Julie Akers were planning a quiet New Year's Eve celebration. They were thinking about going out for dinner and watching the Times Square ball drop on TV

Instead, they ended up going to Times Square to usher in the New Year on a dream date

David Akers, 33, had forgotten all about the poem he wrote for a New Year's toast contest nine months ago. But last month, the software engineer found out that his toast won him and his wife an all-expensepaid trip to Times Square for New Year's Eve A representative of Korbel, the California champagne company that sponsored the contest, left a message on the couple's answering machine Julie, 35, an artist and stay-at home mom, heard the message first, but thought it was a seam.

I thought, there's got to be a eatch I called them and said, can you send us something in writing9 The four-day package included airline tickets, a hotel room, a tuxedo and gown, invitations to a Korbel party and $1,000 in spending

It all started when David was using an Internet search engine and spied the ad for the Korbel contest. It called for entrants to write an original toast for the millennium in 50 or fewer words

"The thing popped up, so I said, okay, I can try that, not expecting to win or anything," he said

David said he doesn't consider himself much of a writer. Julie says writing was one of his toughest subjects in school. But David figured that he could handle writing a toast. He worked on it for about half an hour and ended up with exactly 50 words

"Raise your glass high! 2000 bubbles, one for each year

Round the world, promising good

A tribute to mankind for all we've achieved

To the courage and sacrifice of those who believed

Goodbye to a millennium, hello

Here's to the pleasure of being with you!'

Were did the Nicholsons concerned about their safety?

"I don't think so," Dick Nicholson said. "No. I'm not worried at all." Zack

Nicholson said This year organizers brought back children's events in the afternoon, which proved popular. At the performance tent at School and North State streets, a standingroom-only crowd watched Alejandro's Magik Showe, which mixed magic and

Celeste and Gordon Craig of Sanbornton brought their two children yesterday afternoon for such events. They attended the Kids Imagination Market at the Green Street Community Center, where 4-yearold Gerry learned a few dance steps. He and his little sister, Katie, came away with helium-filled balloons

Familial, not security concerns, prompted the Craigs to stay for only a few hours. "Ever tried to keep a 2-year-old and a 4year-old up past New Year's?" Gordon Craig joked. When unveiled, this year's ice sculpture chronicled each decade of this century featuring a jukebox for the '50s, a space shuttle for the '80s and - ominously a computer chip with Y2K at the end.

New this year for older folks was the performance featur-"We the People . . ing Gov. Benning Wentworth, Frederick Douglass and Eleanor Roosevelt. "We will have a dialogue, it may become a fight, it all depends on the moderator," said Governor Wentworth (Stuart Wallace of Plymouth in colonial garb)

Yet, despite the warm weather and extra security, Mary Lyons, 14, of Dunbarton said she thought there were fewer people than in past years. "But the countdown and fireworks were canceled," she said.

Attendance numbers were not available last night by press time but First Night buttons were still being sold into the night.

Y2K bug's bite proves insignificant

By RAJIV CHANDRASEKARAN The Washington Post

WASHINGTON - The world's computers appeared to confront their long-awaited day of digital reckoning yesterday without any catastrophic problems, illustrating the success of a half-trillion-dollar global effort to prevent electronic devices from falling prey to a simple two-digit programming bug.

It was a dramatic triumph of mankind over machine at the end of a century defined by the march of technology, the result of an unprecedented worldwide mobilization of people and money to frenetically repair and test hundreds of millions of computers to prevent them from grinding to a halt.

"It is a much better day than it could have been," said John Koskinen, the White House's Y2K czar, who spent the day watching how other countries entered the new year.

From Australia and Japan, to China, Russia, India and the nations of Europe and Africa, the much-feared date glitch caused no obvious or severe disruptions in electric power, telephones, banking and other computerized services that define modern life, according to initial assessments from government officials and technology specialists. The reports led to increased confidence that the technological snafu would have only an insignificant impact in the United States

There is a huge sense of relief," said James Woodward, a vice president with Cap Gemini America Inc., an technology firm that has performed Y2K repairs for large businesses. "There was a gargantuan effort, involving huge amounts of people and money, to get everything ready. It now clearly seems like it's been well

Despite the generally upbeat initial reports about the bug's impact, computer specialists warn that the full scope of the Y2K problem may not be known for days and even months. Many corporate computer systems, for instance, will not be put to the test until Monday, when businesses reopen after the holiday weekend And even after that, Y2K-related errors may not show up at some organizations until the end of January, when monthly balance sheets are processed, or the end of March, when quarterly reports are

'It's far too early to declare victory. Koskinen said. "There will be no fairly clear view until we get to the middle of next week.

The Gartner Group, a technology consulting firm, has estimated that only 10 percent of all Y2K failures will occur dur ng the first week of January, while more than half of all errors will crop up later in the year. MasterCard, for instance, plans to keep its command center open around the clock until Jan. 5 to make sure there are no secondary problems once the world gets back to its regular business

But analysts believe whatever problems show up down the road likely will not pose the same risk of emppling businesses or government agencies as a simultaneous failure of electrical or telephone service as clocks clicked over to

Despite the positive assessments from government officials in Asia and Europe, a handful of relatively minor computer problems were reported yesterday. In Japan, the radiation monitoring system at a nuclear power plant about 185 miles northwest of Tokyo malfunctioned a few minutes after midnight, but subsequent checks found radiation levels to be normal and officials could not immediately determine whether the incident was Y2K

Photos by the Associated Press

And at three Delaware racetracks, more than 800 slot machines shut down after a computer sent them data indicating the date was 'January 1, 1900 Other Y2K errors were almost trivial

In France, the time display on a satellite weather map posted on the Internet by the country's national service listed 19100" as the year in a European fore-

And the Auckland, New Zealand, international airport advised travelers through its Internet site that the "airport is oper ating as normal. No Y2K problems have been experienced and all operations are continuing as usual." But at least for a while yesterday, the alert had a time stamp of "02:58 1 Jan 100

As of 4 p.m. U.S. officials reported that 40 nations in 11 times zones had entered the new year, none of which appeared to encounter major problems. Russia's defense system, the subject of significant concern among the U.S. military, was reported to be functioning normally, Koskonen said

The sanguine reports from other parts of the world muted consumer demand in the United States for bottled water, battenes and other supplies to cope with possible disruptions in basic services Many stores and gas stations reported only slightly higher numbers of shoppers. while some bank branches, which had opened for customers' last minute cash withdrawais, were almost empty

sumers were stockpiling at least one essential item. Bottled water was scarce at Shaw's supermarket; the store was sold out of gallon jugs. Some six-packs of small bottles and a half pallet of 212-gallon bottles were all that remained late yesterday afternoon

"It's kind of disgusting," said Richard Perkins of Concord.

He was having his sink fixed and was waiting to have a water filter installed. In the meantime, he has been relying on bottled water.

"I came in yesterday and there was no water. And today there is no water," he said

Recent surveys have found the public is not concerned about Y2K, a computer glitch that had some doomsavers warning that vital services like gas and electricity could shut down because internal clocks would misread the double zeros of 2000 for

A recent American Research Group poll reported that 70 percent of New Hampshire residents had few or no concerns about Y2K.

Meanwhile, federal, state and local officials continued to keep a watchful eye on potential Y2K problems throughout the day. They were tuned to TV coverage of the millennium, watching as the clocks turned midnight around the rest of the world to see if there were any worries coming their way.

No major problems surfaced as revelers rang in the New Year in Australia, Japan, China, Russia, India, Germany, France and England.

There have been no reports of anything going on. Zero," said James Van Dongen, public affairs manager for the state Office of Emergency Management. "That's great, but it's going to make for a boring evening."

ost of Concord's roads were still dirt when Dean Williamson was growing up on Monroe Street in the South End. And they became a god-awful mess come springtime, as melting snow. April rains and heavy traffic turned them into long quagmires of wheel-sucking, shoe-eating muck

"Oh, it would get real bad. The mud would come right up to the hubs," said Dean Williamson, who's 88

Then, almost as an afterthought, he added this observation

"But the horses didn't seem to mind too much. They usually could pull the wagons right through it. And most people were still using horses in those days anyway."

Williamson witnessed most of the 20th century as it unfolded in Concord, where he's lived all his life. And for his uncanny memory of the past, his embrace of the present and his view of the future, today he earns a special, 101st spot on the Monitor's list of 100 notable New Hampshire figures

He and those of his generation lived through an astonishing array of big events here: the celebration at the end of World War I, a deadly influenza epi-

Vietnam: The war that split the nation

In the Concord area, as elsewhere, the Vietnam War caused a huge rift man. Otherwise, go elsewhere to live, such as Cuba, Red China, etc. among the citizenry. Here are two 1968 letters to the editor on the issue. The first ran in the Feb. 8 Monitor, the second on March 7.

Sir Each day I hear countless number of people say, "Don't you think this war is terrible" Why this war? What they are really saying is that this war upsets their private world. All wars are terrible, and certainly not the solution to world problems. Understandably, parents do not want their sons to go to war, but we do live in America, enjoy the privileges and opportunities that being an American allows us

National dilemma

Sir: My conscience is outraged by our involvement in Vietnam. The realization that I am part of a nation that could afflict a people 10,000 miles away with a war they do not want and which leads to neither a military nor political solution is beyond my comprehension.

The U.S. operation in futility was driven home to me six months ago when the rate of our servicemen killed in Vietnam began to number over 100 each week. For the past month it has averaged over 450 each week. In addition to the soldiers on both sides who are dying, thousands of civilians are killed each week and tens of thousands are living under the worst possible conditions. No goals of U.S. self-interest can justify the situation to which we contribute.

The American people face a terrible dilemma: we want our serviceiate their loval

THE AIR RAID

WAIT PATIENTLY AS THE HOURS MOVE SLOWLY AHEAD It is 8 in the evening as I pull on the chain connected to the kitchen light. Immediately we are plunged into darkness, with only a hint of a glow from the ornament attached to the end of the chain. It is 1942, and we are living in Concord.

My mother and I step onto the porch and stand quietly listening for any sound to break the eerie silence. No cars are driving by 18 West St., where we live, no children are playing outside in their yards. Even the nighthawk's shrill cries seem muted as they swoop through the night sky in search of food. Perhaps they also sense a change.

"It is so quiet," my mother whispers as she is caught up in the moment I shiver a bit and answer "It has to be " We walk to the end of the porch, down the steps and along the short path to the sidewalk. We do not hear our neighbors, but sense their presence, as they also are outside listening.

We walk to the corner and watch as a light beams down State Street from uptown. My mother jumps back, startled, "My goodness, that is over half a mile away" she says, and I agree with her. We hear an airplane overhead and listen as it begins to circle above the city

We stand on the corner for a few minutes more and then return home. After closing the outside door, I put the kitchen light on once more. My mother goes into the living room, turns on the table lamp, sits in her favorite chair and begins to read. I go out side once again and begin to walk along the sidewalk, listening for any sounds I sense more than hear the quiet footsteps of someone coming. A hooded flashlight blinks for a moment and I realize it is Mr. Quimby. He is one of the few people that are supposed to be outside tonight and I do not want to be seen. I sit down on the ground beside a large trash barrel as Quimby walks by with out noticing me. He is walking through the neighborhood to check houses for light that might be showing from behind covered up windows. Quimby is an air raid warden' able group could remain at home safe from combat.

Why is so much television coverage given dissension, draft card burners and hippies? If these groups were aware they were not going to be seen on television, it might defeat their reasons for all their activities.

Parents are too lax on discipline, not caring where and what their teenagers are doing. Parents of children in college should tell them that if they join or participate in groups dissenting, rioting, etc., then all financial help from home will be taken away.

As for the ridiculous behavior of students on campus when a representative of a chemical company arrives to interview graduating students! These companies also manufacture medicine - should we riot against medicine? As for bearded professors, ministers and doctors who preach hate and dissension and encourage young men to turn in their draft cards, they should be arrested, charged with treason and sent to prison. How dare these men stand and sing "God Bless America" when they have commit-my husband died in Korea, and in both these wars, and all other wars innocent civilians were killed because of bombs, etc. At present my two sons are serving in Vietnam. One son is on his second tour of duty, as he feels this is his duty and obligation as an American.

Every able and eligible American male has an obligation and duty to his country! It is to answer your draft call, and conduct yourself like a situation to which we contribute.

The American people face a terrible dilemma: we want our servicemen to know we appreciate their loyalty to the United States as they do what our government commands; at the same time, we suspect it is all ill advised and a uscless application of lives and wealth. And the events of the past few weeks now prove more and more that we have failed - at a terrible, terrible price.

The present administration affirms that we shall escalate even more. To many of us, it all demonstrates moral bankruptcy. Shall we now continue a war in spite of the will of the American people?

In the New Hampshire Primary on March 12, we have an opportunity to register our moral outrage. As a private citizen who feels keenly the condemnation of God upon our national involvement in Vietnam, I urge you to vote for one of the candidates who are for an immediate modification of our Vietnam policy toward de-escalation.

A resounding vote for those advocating a political solution in Vietnam could have an immediate effect on the war.

- Miller C. Lovett, Laconia

(On March 12, 1968, Democratic voters gave Sen. Eugene McCarthy, a peace candidate, 42 percent of the vote against President Lyndon B. Johnson. Johnson announced 19 days later that he would not seek re-election. In November Republican Richard M. Nixon won the presidency. The Vietnam War ended in 1975.)

KNOW WHAT I SAW, ALL THOSE YEARS AGO. IT WAS YEARS LATER, however, that I learned what I had been looking at.

What I saw was a blue sky, dappled with puffy white and gray clouds, below which were two moving objects black and small and very noisy. I don't remember ever seeing anything like them before. Fluttering out of these strange machines came clouds of pieces of paper, twisting and fluttering as they floated to the ground.

What I learned later was that the date of that sighting was November 11, 1918. What I was looking at was the announcement to the people of Baltimore that the "Great War" was over. With no radio or television news in those days, newspapers were the fastest means of wide communication.

So it was that the first airplanes I ever saw, at age notquite-four, were spreading the news of the Armistice.

The glad bells tell the tale

This story ran in the Evening Monitor of Nov. 11, 1918, the day the armistice was signed ending World War I. The headline was "THE GLAD BELLS TELL THE TALE. And Victory Bombs Convey the Message of Triumph: How News of the Surrender of the Enemy Came to Concord"

But a very short time was needed in Concord to start one of the biggest celebrations the city had ever witnessed, when the news of the signing of the armistice by the German government was received.

It was only a matter of seconds after the information had been telephoned by the Monitor to the Central Fire Station before the bells over the central station as well as in the North End Tower began to sound, giving the glad tidings to the people of the city.

Superintendent of the State House Frank L. Hayes was in charge of the celebration planned by Adjutant General Charles W. Howard and record time was made by him in setting off the 25 aerial bombs, the official signal of the acceptance of the terms offered Germany by Marshal Foch.

The morning celebration, which started just before 8 o'clock, was only the beginning of the day's program, which in most part was in charge of the Boys City Club.

A parade through the principal streets of the city was participated in by hundreds in the early morning, and at the State House for nearly three hours over a thousand people cheered the names of Marshal Foch, General Pershing, other allied commanders and President Wilson

An impressive part of the exercises was the silent prayer offered by the large crowd to "the boys who will not return". Never in the history of the city was there such a celebration as

We must have it As one of 27 gun-ships supporting the invasion to come Feb. 19, we creep in to bombard. It is quiet. Smoke and dust still billow up from the land -60 planes, mostly dive-bombers, from 12 light carriers have just bombed forts dug into the volcanic rock.

Not a human in sight.

With maps showing countless targets, pillboxes, blockhouses and bunkers, we fire intermittently. There are loud, echoing bam-m-m-ms from six battleships, less from five cruisers, and bangs from 16 destroyers.

We are smaller and can steam close to shore. Will the defenders fire at us? It has happened before

Oh, we have been through this bombarding routine before, backing landing forces. After 17 months in the Atlantic, then in '43 from Tarawa, I have been in 13 operations, dodging the Emperor's ordnance. It is a tiring, dull, gritty, grinding, sometimes ugly business. Vigilance every minute, tension rising like the tightening of a piano wire

D-Day, Feb 19. We are 200 yards off Suribachi. The landing boats to the right chug. They ground on beaches, and Marines leap out. Some fall, others press on. We bombard faster, overhearing various radio messages, many urgent. Smoke and dust rise in huge clouds from Iwo. Some envelop us. That's it, "Do the Dirty Job and Go Home," the servicemen's motto. We move about. The island is February bleak and cheerless

D-Day plus 4, Feb. 23. On the bridge, forenoon watch. One of the watch-keepers exclaims to me, "Jeez-us, sir, look!"

Men, our men, are crawling up Suribachi's 45-degree slope. Crouched, dodging fire, they're in our binoculars, almost penguins. They're halfway to the too.

Later, about 10:30 a.m., after maneuvers to fire, we spot a flag on a pole being raised The six men strain and bend, their arms reaching skyward - it's up. I'm officer of the watch, and I'm yelling. So are the others, so are our gun crews.

An impressive part of the exercises was the silent prayer offered by the large crowd to "the boys who will not return."

Never in the history of the city was there such a celebration as that today, and everybody in the city took part. The schools were closed all day, the stores of the city were closed at noon and all the manufacturing plants gave the holiday to their employees

Parades up and down the street followed in close succession during the day, schoolchildren figuring prominently in most of them.

Flags by the thousand made an instant appearance, and the streets of the city at noon showed the attitude with which Concord received the tidings. The French and British colors appeared, alongside of the Stars and Stripes, and many Itahan flags were also displayed.

This afternoon at 2 o'clock a mass meeting was held at the South Church which was attended by people of every creed

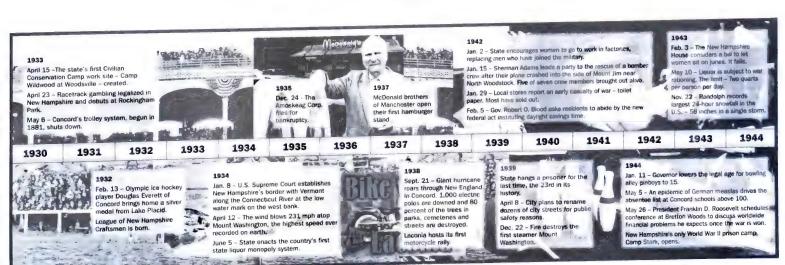

On the program this afternoon was a big automobile parade, but the great event of the day will be the Boys City Club Celebration this evening which will start with a parade at 7 o'clock

A large peace arch has been erected at Stickney Field, where there will be a display of fireworks and a big bonfire, and people are urged not to leave their noisemakers at home. The parade tonight will be headed by Nevers' Second Regiment Band, and taking part in the procession will be the St. Paul School Battalion, J.N. Patterson Camp S. of V. Company M of the State Guard, Boys City Club delegation, Wonolancet Club delegation, B&M shop men and many other bodies. Grand Army veterans will be furnished transportation for the parade.

Penacook people were quick to respond to news of the signing of the armistice, over 400 people being out on the street in a parade before 4 o'clock, the number being augmented to over a thousand an hour later. The noisemakers were busy all day, and tonight a clebration program will be carried out

At East Concord there was great rejoicing in the early hours of the day and many people thronged the streets when the bells began to ring. The ringing of the fire bell was commenced by Mrs Annie Mann.

That the news of the action of the German representatives should reach the city so soon after the actual signing of the all-important document (Concord people, in fact, being privileged to get the information as soon as it was announced in Boston, New York and other large cities) is another of the noteworthy feats of The Associated Press.

PLANE SPOTTER

T IS 4 O'CLOCK ON A SATURDAY MORNING IN THE LATE SUMMER OF 1943 WHEN MY ALARM CLOCK STARTS TO RING. I wake up and walk over to the chimney halfway down the center wall in my bedroom. I am living at 18 West St. in a duplex house and have the back upstairs bedroom. I remove the flue cover and reach a stick through the chimney and push against the flue cover on the opposite side. Soon I hear stirring and the cover is removed. "I am up." comes a voice. I get dressed and go downstairs to wait for George Wood.

We are going to man the airplane spotting tower from 6 to 10 this morning, as we have been doing every Saturday morning for the last three months. We peddle our bikes north on Main Street and over Bridge Street to Loudon Road. It is about a four-mile ride, and we leave ourselves enough time to stop at the small store on the Heights and pick up a snack to eat later in the morning.

The spotting tower is a two-story wood frame building that sits in a cleared area on top of Blueberry Hill. There is one large room with a table and a few chairs plus a toilet on the ground If a plane is either floor. A ladder stretches up through a trap door and into the communications room seen or heard, it is our above. This room has a large table with a map of the area, two telephones, binocuresponsibility to call that lars, pencils and notepads. Posted on the walls are silhouettes of World War II airinformation in to a speplanes from all the major countries. A door leads from this room onto a deck cial number that conwith a wooden railing around the complete second story. nects us to the New

George and I park our bikes and climb upstairs. The Rev. Webb and two students from St. Paul's School greet us. As it is nearly 6, they prepare to leave. We sign in the log and begin our shift.

If a plane is either seen or heard, it is our responsibility to call that information in to a special number that connects us to the New England plotting center. We are to relay as much information as we can. A typical call is, "One, high, seen/heard, east, west." This tells them we either saw or heard the plane and that it was coming from the east and leaving our area heading west.

One morning a flight of seven P-47s flew up from the Manchester air base and circled our area. We had to call them in when they arrived, again as they circled and finally as they left in a group. Then they came back and circled once more, went into a dive and swept by the tower so close the tower trembled. We were able to see a couple of the pilots wave to us as they banked by before splitting up and leaving in several directions. We had to call the center, first for the circling, then to give a separate logging for the direction of each plane as it left. I am sure the pilots had some fun at our expense.

One Saturday, as we were returning home, we noticed a large crowd at the State House, so we stopped and asked what was going on. We were told that a man running for president was meeting folks. We went up to the second floor and into a large room, where a man standing in the doorway asked our names. He in turn gave our names to Gov. Blood, who introduced us to the Republican presidential candidate, Wendell Willkie. He was a big man with very large hands.

Mr. Willkie shook hands with us and asked why we were there instead of out playing. When we told him what we had been doing, he held up the line for a few moments and asked George and me several questions about what we did as spotters.

Lindbergh stops in capital city

Col. Charles A. Lindbergh made the first transallantic crossing by air on May 20-21, 1927. Shortly after returning home by ship, he toured the country. This story, which has been abridged, appeared in the July 25, 1927. Monitor. That was the day of Lindbergh's official visit to Concord. However, he had also landed in Concord two days before because the airport in Portland, Maine, was fogged in. The story was not bylined, but it was probably written by Ruel N. Colby, later the Monitor's longtime sports editor.

A silvery monoplane, headed by an escort, swooped in out of the skies at 1 o'clock this afternoon, circled the Airport and was off again to Manchester as cheers from the thousands of spectators roared a greeting to Col. Charles A. Lindbergh.

A few moments later, after his escort plane had landed, and the Colonel himself had circled the city of Manchester, the Spirit of St. Louis came into sight again to land like a dove of peace.

More than 40,000 people crammed the Airport, and the same smiling, boyish Lindy who had come in out of the storm, for his first unofficial visit to New Hampshire on Saturday came out of the hangar and mounted the platform to speak briefly to the crowd

Nevers' Second Regiment Band played "Hail to the Chief."

Unlike Saturday's unexpected arrival, today's coming had been wildly heralded, and as his "Spirit of St. Louis" was sighted high in the heavens there were shouts of "Here he comes!" "There he is!" and then a silence for just a second as eyes turned to sight him and ears tuned themselves to the sing of his motor and "we" were here.

Spirit of St. Louis, this most excellent type of American manhood left America the 'flying fool' and landed in Europe the flying hero of the world, before whom kings and queens, princes and potentates feel honored to bow.

"He has just landed at this airport which airport by the way is potentially one of the best in America, and today the most famous, and was made possible by a small handful of Concord's public-spirited citizens, who not only talked aviation but when capital was needed for its establishment were willing to produce it. It is to them and the two or three young men who promoted this enterprise that we are indebted for this landing here today of Col. Lindbergh. He has just landed at this airport in this same ship, the Spirit of St. Louis, in which he made that most wonderful, most glorious and successful trans-Atlantic flight, forging a link of air connecting the Old World with the New. I now have the very great honor to present to you Col. Lindbergh, flying champion of the world."

The crowd roared again as Col-Lindbergh stepped forward in response to his introduction

Col. Lindbergh said, "This is my second visit to Concord largely because of the airport established here. Day before yesterday the fog over Portland made it necessary to land on some other field. Concord, I believe, has the closest available airport.

"This airport can still be improved in many ways. In the future it will bring you considerable air commerce Within a few years you will have air mail service and passenger ships stopping daily.

"Fog today is still an obstacle to aviation. We can fly through it but not land in it. On our trip to Paris we flew through several miles of fog and more

BLIMP OVER CONCORD

T WAS A SUMMER DAY IN 1930 AT CONCORD AIRPORT. THE excitement was that a dirigible was taking passengers for brief rides over the city. (This was a smaller version of the Hindenberg, which along with other helium-filled balloons were still in their glory.)

My parents and five of us six children were among the crowd lining the fence. When a ticket seller saw our bunch, he gave Dad a bargain rate, and promised $20,000 insurance if we all perished. I could see Mother's hesitation, but Dad quickly accepted.

We were packed like sardines in the tiny cabin attached below the balloon. The craft was propelled by revolving air screws which got us airborne. There were windows on all sides, but Mother with her fear of heights did not look out.

This quiet craft did one broad circle of Concord – with its river, State House dome, railroad tracks and shops. Soon we were over the airport again where we could see men running below us to grab the ropes dangling from the craft. We watched them bring us down.

On the ground at last, I had a real show-and-tell experience to share. I was also taken by the thought that the $20,000 insurance would no longer be available to bring up baby sister (who had stayed home with Grandma) "in luxury."

Not long after, the craft burned at sea with only the crew on board.

themselves to the sing of his motor and "we" were here.

He was immediately a part of the throng, not with it but of it. Concord and New Hampshire took him unto themselves as one of them, just as those few, who had been privileged to see him and the few who had greeted him on the former occasion, marveled at his boyish enthusiastic naturalness and welcomed him as one they knew.

Lindy had come to them today from Portland whence he had flown yesterday despite the warnings of those who feared for his safety.

He came, for the second time, to a field which he had seen but twice with the same perfect landing which characterized his alight at Le Bourget a scarce two months ago.

Twenty minutes after Lindbergh had made his landing the crowd continued to throng onto the field in greater numbers than ever before, bringing the total fully up to the estimated 40,000 and probably even more.

While waiting, Col. Lindbergh autographed a picture of himself which has for several days hung in the airport office. At 1:55 Col. Lindbergh with Mayor Fred Marden, Senator George T. Moses, Donald T. Hall, Acting Governor Frank P. Tilton, Major George W. Morrill, John W. Pearson, Miss Hope Jackson and a boy scout left the Airport and mounted the platform.

Photographers who had awaited his coming were shooed off the platform as his program got under way. Every limb of the pine tree near the stand was occupied by boys and girls. The crowd cheered as Mayor Marden officially welcomed Col. Lindbergh to Concord.

The Mayor said in part:

"As the chief executive of this, the capital city of New Hampshire, it becomes my pleasant duty, joyous privilege and high honor to welcome within our gates the most talked of man in the world. A few short weeks ago unknown and unsung, actuated by no other motive than his love for aviation and aeronautics and their peromotion, alone and unattended in his airship the aviation. We can fly through it but not land in it. On our trip to Paris we flew through several miles of log and more than 1,000 miles of fog and storms.

"This shows that you can fly through a fog area regardless of size, the only obstacle being the fuel capacity of the plane.

"Instruments to be used in landing in a fog are being experimented upon. These radio beacons will keep a plane on its course despite fog. Experiments are being carried on in Europe laying cables on the field while the plane is still flying.

"This will enable aviators to land without looking out of the cockpit. There is still much to be done.

"On this tour we are selling aviation on its merits today, but we look forward to future possibilities. In a few years, we can operate in any fog

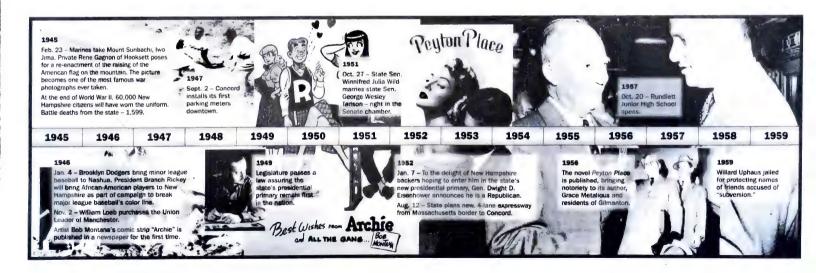

"The citizens of New Hampshire and Concord will do well to look to the developments of this airport.

"A small group of men were foresighted enough to build the port. The future depends on you. It is not possible for a small group of men to be responsible for the future of this landing place. I hope in the future you will see fit to improve it into a Class A landing field. I compliment you on its condition today."

At the conclusion of the ovation given to Col. Lindbergh at the airport, the distinguished guest and his retinue of city, state and military officials, got into motor cars and within a few minutes moved off the field through a narrow lane kept clear by police officers. Nevers' Band proceeded the official cars bearing Lindbergh and the others.

Thousands upon thousands lined Bridge street between the airport and Main street, and all along Main street there was a veritable sea of humanity, especially heavy at the State House Plaza. The cheer were staggering as the great American hero arrived, smiling and bowing and winning every spectator by his boyish, frank charm

Sirens blew, whistles shrieked, thousands of automobiles throughout the city let loose with the greatest din of horn blowing imaginable.

Remembering Christa

This column ran in the Monitor on Jan 29. 1986, the day after the Challenger disaster It was written by Bob Hohler, now a Boston Globe reporter, and appeared under the headline: "We won't be the same without her

Christa McAuliffe died yesterday with a few of her favorite things, her son's stuffed frog, her daughter's cross and chain, her grandmother's watch, her Carly Simon tape. She died with little things. Ordinary things

Put her by a swimming pool with her family, a bacon, lettuce and tomato sandwich and a cold beer, and she needed little more from life. Give her a compass, her childhood friends and a forest, and she flourished. Call her a hero, and she shuddered

In the 200 days I knew her, Christa went from a Concord High School classroom to a spacecraft bound for an infinite frontier in the sky. She asked to be nothing more than an ordinary person on an extraordinary mission.

How silly, she said on the day I met her in Houston, that people would swarm her for autographs. How absolutely crazy, she said three weeks ago, that the New England Patriots would line up after a game for her signature. What a joy it would be, she imagined, to return to signing hall passes at the high school.

Sputnik's ominous beep

This editorial appeared in the Monitor on Oct. 9, 1957, four days after Americans learned that the Soviet Union had launched the first satellite Though not bylined, it was almost certainly written by Monitor editor James M Langley. It ran under the headline "Sputnik's ominous

Soviet Russia's satellite continues to spin through the earth's outer space and the insistent beep-beep of its radio transmitter, heard throughout the world, heralds the entry of mankind into a new age

The world has only begun to sense the profound implications of the successful launching of this satellite, implications which are scientific, military, political and social Not since the United States dropped its first atomic bomb has an event so challenged the past and so dictated the need for an entirely new approach to the future. A new approach in our thinking, our planning, our diplomacy and our world relationships.

It is easy to say, as some officials in Washington are saying, that the United States shortly will launch its own satellite and then "we'll be even." Unfortunately, as we see it, we will not be even.

For the Russians got there first this time. And that is the fact which millions are thinking about today wherever the beep-beep of that satellite is heard, which is just about everywhere Probably two-thirds of those millions are either uninformed or ill-informed, and Moscow will do its best to convince them that since Russia first launched the satellite and that since Russia also is Communist - therefore Communism leads the world in science.

Red leaders in Moscow are crowing about their success in beating the United States. Launching of the satellite has destroyed the legend of Soviet technical inferiority It could well raise doubts in many minds about western scientific leadership

Probably the greatest challenge of all in the new age ushered in by what the Russians call Sputnik is the challenge of a new approach, in both West and East, to the problem of world peace. There does not seem to be much point in scientifically reaching the moon if a race for more devastating missiles is to annihilate civilization down here

Linked with the satellite is the progress that is being made in development of intercontinental missiles. Great rocket power was needed to hurl a body weighing 184 pounds about 360 miles above the surface of the earth, and presumably similar rockets could be used to send a hydrogen or an atomic bomb thousands of miles. Last August Russia claimed it had intercontinental ballistic missiles.

Around the world the beep-beep of Russia's satellite is being heard. It would be folly to pretend that we in the United States do not hear it and fail to grasp its message.

In Houston, Christa and I ate tortellini with friends at an Italian restaurant. We talked about her children, Scott, 9, who couldn't sleep without his stuffed frog. Fleagle, or his live cat. Rizzo, and Caroline, 6, who loved Michael Jackson and liked to draw pictures of her mother in a space-

Like schoolchildren across the country, my daughter Lauren had watched the launch on television. I worried that she might fear for my safety, I called her

"Is Christa dead?" she said with a nervous giggle "I don't know." I told her, "but it doesn't look

"I don't know." I told her, "but it doesn very good."

When I called back last night, she knew Christa was dead. As we talked, she drew a picture of the shuttle in flames.

"They're going to bring her back, aren't they" she said

I told her Christa was a pioneer, a brave woman who risked her life to explore a new frontier. I told her she was with the angels now

"But my life won't be the same without her,"

Then she drew a snowman and two shuttles on top of mountain peaks Beneath it, she wrote, "To Christa. You're the best. Love, Lauren."

MOUNT WASHINGTON

ORN IN WOLFEBORO IN 1914. I GREW UP IN A HOUSE ON THE BREWSTER ACADEMY CAMPUS WHERE MY FATHER WAS A TEACHER. Lake Winnipesaukee was my backyard swimming pool, and in the summer I spent a good many hours at Sandy Beach (now called Brewster Beach, I believe.)

A highlight of any day at Sandy was "getting the Mount's waves." These waves were not the perfect ones a surfer waits for - the kind that crest and curl and can be ridden gracefully into shore. The Mount made large and lumbering waves, gentle rollers that let you swim or float on top and didn't break and crash and knock you down. And I'm not talking about the sleek Mount Washington that currently skims the waters of Lake Winnipesaukee. The Mount of my day was smaller, slower and more ponderous, with her paddle wheels, smoke stack and walking beam

Every year on the day the Mount was to make her first run of the season, my brother and I, and other neighborhood kids, would congregate at Brewster Academy on its rise overlooking Wolfeboro Bay. There, ignoring the beautiful view of the Belknap Range across the Lake beyond Barndoor Island and "the broads," we would rivet our eyes on Sewall Point hoping to be the first to see the Mount come into view.

First would come the black smoke rising above and beyond Goodhue and Hawkins Navy Yard. We couldn't have, but I'd swear that next we could hear the rhythmic chug of the Mount as she labored to push her nose into view through the trees on the end of the Point. And finally, there she was, in full view, her smoke stack still smoking and her walking beam working up and down and up and down.

It didn't matter any more who had seen her first. There she was - the Mount - our first real harbinger of summer.

FEEDING HOBOS

t all began one blustery fall day in the late 1930s. The leaves had long since fallen, and the cold wind blowing through the barren branches of the trees was evidence that winter was fast approaching.

Dad. Mother and I had just gotten off the bus at the corner of South Main and West streets. We were hurrying to reach the doorway to our apartment, which was located in the front upstairs at 1 West. A few steps from the apartment door a man was standing by himself. He was not wearing a coat, a thin sweater his only protection from the cold, and he was noticeably shivering.

Mother felt sorry for the man and asked if he would like to step into the hallway to warm up a bit, and Dad then asked if he was waiting for someone. It seems the man was waiting until 6 so he could safely go down to the railroad yards and catch a ride on the freight train. He thanked my folks and sat down on the stairs and put his back against the side. I looked down the stairs a few minutes later, and he was sleeping.

I began listening to the adventures of Jack Armstrong, the All-American Boy. Do you remember the name of the company that brought that radio show? Wheaties! ("Won't you try Wheaties the best breakfast food in the land.") Dad and Mother were in the kitchen talking, and soon I heard Dad go out into the hall and down the stairs. A few seconds later Dad came into the apartment with the man. My dad then showed him where the bathroom was so he could freshen up.

We all sat down in the kitchen, and Mother put food on the table. The man's name was George. He was originally from California and had been a hobo for years. His clothes were worn, though fairly clean, and George spoke about many of the places he had seen. He also spoke about many of the kind folks he had met in his travels. After supper was done, Dad gave the man an old coat to help keep out some of the cold, and Mother gave him a large glass of elderberry wine. It was nearly time for the freight to leave, and we bundled up and walked down to the tracks together. We stood on the bridge and watched George jump into an empty freight car just as the train began to move. He looked up at us, and as we waved, we could see George mouth the word "Thanks"

That was just the beginning. A week or so later there was a knock on the door and a man stood there with his hat in his hand. "I heard one can get something to eat here," he said We had him come in and wash up before being fed.

My folks did not seem to mind, and there was nothing to fear in those days. If my parents were not home, I was allowed to give them a sandwich but never allowed to give them any wine. And soon they would head for the bathroom to wash without being shown. We also made a point of standing on the railroad bridge and waving goodbye to the men we had fed as they lay in an open gondola car or sat in an open boxcar.

How did they know where to come? I recently read an article that said hobos left special marks on fences or buildings for others coming along at a later date. These marks not only told that food was available but gave the address of the home and anything special the men should know. We lived in that apartment for four years and must have averaged one or two hobos a month between April and November. I never did see a lady hobo.

and immediately return home. I pick up my lunch bag from the desk, put on my jacket and we all walk out of the school. There is no reason given for our early departure.

The State House Annox is being erected across from the school on State Street, and I notice some construction workers also leaving. It is about a 20-minute walk down State Street to my home at 1 West St. My mother is home when I arrive and very surprised to see me. "Are you sick? In trouble at school?" she asks. "No," I answer, but can't tell my mother why we had been sent home. Mrs. St. Onge, who lives across the hall, comes to our door and tells my mother she has just heard we are in for very high winds and heavy rain. She also says everyone is being asked to stay indoors.

My dad comes home about an hour later, followed shortly by my brother, Alfred. Both have heard there is a hurricane soon to hit the area and had been released from work.

We put candles in the living room, kitchen and dining room with matches beside each candle. Dad and my brother each take a flashlight from the pantry drawer and put them in their pockets. Soon the windows in the house begin to rattle. We look out and see papers, boxes, tree branches and many unidentified objects being picked up by the strong wind and strewn about. There is only an occasional car on the road, and the car lights are not strong enough to pierce the darkness and wind-blown rain.

Then we hear glass breaking and run to the front room to find a pane of glass smashed on the floor. The gale force wind rip the curtain and rod off its hooks and the rain begins to soak every thing it can reach. Dad gets a piece of plywood from the shed and covers up the window so only a small amount of rain continues to come in.

Mother and I mop up the excess water. It is then that the lights begin to flicker, and within minutes the apartment is in total darkness as is the rest of the neighborhood. About this time we become aware of a lot of velling coming from the side of the building, and

About this time we become aware of a lot of yelling coming from the side of the building, and Dad and I go to the back door to see what the shouting is for. A large maple is swaying back and forth in the gusts of wind. It leans toward the road and then back toward the house that stands behind the tree. I hear men betting a dollar as to which way the tree will fall. Then a strong gust pushes the tree into the home and smashes a small roof and two windows. The storm lasts about another hour before the wind and rain die down, and soon we began to notice the quiet.

The next morning the sun shines brightly under a clear blue sky. Just before noon we take the Penacook bus uptown to see the damage. It is devastating. Old maples and elms are uprooted with several lying on parked cars and on house roofs. Telephone poles are snapped off at their base, and some are dangling with the wires still attached. Roofs are been torn away, and porches collapsed. No street is spared and very few houses escape with no damage. The parks lose hundreds of large pine trees that lay like giant matchsticks. For that one storm, the city is brought to its knees and it takes weeks to return to a more normal pace. Thirteen people lose their lives in New Hampshire alone. One man is killed a block away from our house when a roof is torn off a garage, carried 80 feet by the wind and drops on him. And four ladies drown when they are swept off a bridge in Wearc.

Concord Railroad Station, circa 1900

THREE CHEERS

This speech was written by Concord Mayor Charles Johnson for the April 19, 1960, groundbreaking ceremony at the Storrs Street shopping plaza which would replace the city's 19th century railroad station:

n breaking ground for a new shopping center, I feel the same pride of our city and hope for its future as was felt by those who laid the cornerstone of the then-new railroad station back in 1885.

With the advent of new industries and retail outlets. Concord is entering a new era, and we are all proud to have a part in it. As mayor of Concord, I feel I am under obligations to its people to do my utmost in making this city a progressive, growing, prosperous place in which to live and to work.

Situated as we are in the center of southern New Hampshire, the hub of excellent highways, plus rail and air service, we have these great physical assets to start with. If we can add to these geographical and physical assets the determination and enthusiasm of our citizens, this city can add to its valuation and earning power to more than offset the drain of increased costs over which we have no control.

Faced with the loss of employment, the abandonment of acres of valuable land and the loss of earning power in the Boston and Maine large shops, the picture has now been changed to one of great capital expenditures, adding to the value of our city, that together with more employment and the attraction of more people to our city gives us the potential of a great future.

It is hard for me to express the sincere gratitude and appreciation that I feel for those who have assisted in this transition. The board of aldermen and the planning board have done their share and are still working on perfecting the development. To them is due great credit for past achievement, and encouragement to apply their good judgment and advice to the completion of this shopping center and make it the largest and most attractive one north of Boston - in other words, maintain the reputation that Concord enjoyed 100 years ago with the largest railroad station north of Boston

Concord must have some valuable assets to attract a businessman like Paul Mannos to invest $2 million in this area and to attract concerns such as those represented here by Mr. Newberry, Mr. Rabb and other tenants.

Last but not least among those who made this transition possible is a man I have grown to know and respect: the president of the Boston and Maine Railroad, Patrick McGinnis. I compliment him on the progress he has made as reported at a recent annual meeting of the Boston and Maine. Through his realistic view of values, his recognition of this city's need, this shopping center area was made available to Paul Mannos, able and willing to develop its potentials.

Concord has much to be thankful for in the completion of this shopping center with its added valuation and enormous parking facilities, all made possible by private capital.

For Mr. Mannos I pray for a smooth competent construction and ample rentals - for the tenants a large and prosperous business, for Mr. McGinnis the successful completion of his reorganization problems, all of these for the benefit of the good city of Concord, the capital of the state of New Hampshire.

CIVILIAN CONSERVATION CORPS

Y EXPERIENCE IN THE CIVILIAN CONSERVA-TION Corps started in January 1935 when I was assigned to the 160th Co. CCC in Greenville, Maine. On June 21 that year, as a member of a cadre of 23 young men from the 160th, I arrived in Warner, N.H., to help open a new camp, the 1147th Co. CCC.

Our principal project was to build the road to Mount Kearsarge and work in state parks and forest lands. We lived in tents that summer while buildings were being constructed, on Kearsarge Mountain Road about five miles from town.

My job during construction was clerk-of-the-works: timekeeping, handling payrolls, hiring, firing, checking specifications of materials and completed work. A lot of responsibility for a 19-year-old.

Camp opened Oct. 15 with 175 new men, mostly from New Hampshire and Maine. I was the canteen steward until the next spring when I was promoted to senior leader

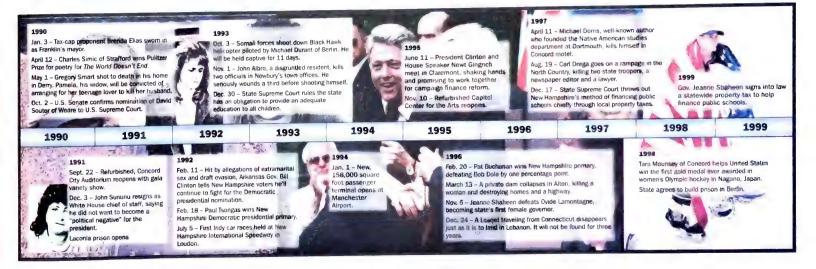

In May 1936, the New Hampshire and Maine men were transferred to other camps, and we received 150 new men from Massachusetts cities. We had to start all over again, teaching this group to become a good workforce, and they soon did.

The young men learned many skills - operating bulldozers, graders, jackhammers, how to use explosives, drive trucks, maintain and repair equipment. The training and the experience of living and working together were of tremendous value. The men worked as "buddy" teams, each doing his share and depending on each other to get a job done. They learned the basics of good leadership, as all assistant leaders and leaders were promoted from within their ranks. Our country also benefited from the training the CCC provided. A large majority of members served in the armed forces and many became officers and non-commissioned officers during World War II.

As senior leader, I was responsible for several hundred of these young men during my nearly four years in the CCC. The experience has been of great benefit to me ever since. During my military service in World War II in the Philippines, I was promoted to first sergeant due to my CCC service as a senior leader.

Pierre is disgusted

The following letter ran in the Monitor on April 9, 1948, during a controversy over whether to build a swimming pool in West Concord. The state Board of Health had closed the old pool for sanitation reasons three years before, and Concord's aldermen were resisting a plan to build a new one. The letter was headlined "Pierre is disausted".

Editor. Monitor-Patriot As it looks from here, at the next meeting of the Board of Aldermen, on April 12, 1948, the proposed swimming pool in West Concord will go down in defeat. This will be another memorable date in the history of old conservative Concord for again, "keep the tax rate down" will have won a great victory

And two years hence, the Aldermen who oppose the swimming pool will all parade before the Women Voters' League and with great civic pride, they will all shout in a chorus, "Look at my record, I voted to keep the tax rate down." These same men will come to the mothers and fathers of Concord and tell them how much they did for their children and ask their vote in return

We may have a few new schools, with proper lighting for the kids, which is all right, but without gyms. We cannot afford to raise the tax rate too much by adding gyms to our schools Only the French people of this town are silly enough to think otherwise for, They are backward besides paying taxes like the other citizens of Concord, they dig out of people, those their own pockets and support, besides the beautiful Sacred Heart Church, the pastor's house, the I touchmen, who think nuns' home, a school whose doors are not shut in God's face, and the 1 of the content and offonly grammar school gym in Concord. They are backward people, those Frenchmen, who think that and the state of t recreation may offset some delin 1 combelies chall quency They even believe that education is a power, and that if admeation is a peace. the boy or girl grows up to be good or bad and is educated, his or her power to do good or bad increases and that if the bey or proportionately We will have more and better the tox sup to be good or had and is educated.

We will have more and better and bigger barroom clubs and more money will be spent on liquor We can't afford $110,000 for a pool, but we can spend $1 million on liquor in Concord. These clubs, unlike our library and our schools, are self-supporting and are paid for by those who use them. Of course, these may increase our drunk problem, but we can tax these clubs, set up another organization to teach these young men and adults and women how to drink without getting drunk and without spending the money their proportionately.

We will have better vaccination centers for the prevention of diseases, and a paid city physician, but we will continue to force our children and youth to swim in waters polluted by our cesspools, and why not? The cows will continue to bathe unmolested in Long Pond, but if a boy or girl is caught doing the same, woe to him or her. The dogs and cats will continue to use our porches and lawns for toilets and will knock our garbage cans over, and run the streets and howl all right, but if an a-year-old boy or girl does it, all the saintly women in the neighborhood will call the police station, a dozen crusing cars will immediately appear on the scene, the culprit will be apprehend ed and he or she will be warned that unless he or she improves his or her way, he or she will be sent to the reformatory school

FDR

Patricia Fairfield was a 19-year-old from Concord training as a nurse in Troy, NY, during the last months of World War II. She wrote to her mother Edith Fairfield, 218 Eastman St., on April 16, 1935, just after the death of President Franklin D. Roosevelt. This portion of her letter appeared in the Monitor a few days later.

I'm sure you must have been as stunned as I was upon hearing of the death of our President It was almost unbelievable. It seems such a sorrow that he didn't live to see the Victory and Peace he had worked so and killed himself for

I listened to the broadcast from Georgia this morning of the starting of his train North It was so very sad! I had tears in my eyes but held them back. Then I heard the birds down in Georgia singing The tears wouldn't stay and I said, "God. you have created a beautiful world".

Today I realized as never before what a truly great civilization man and God working hand in hand have created That one man could be so beloved and so universally mourned, regardless of color, race or creed, is symbolic of this, I think

Doubtless you, mother, have been listening to the radio this morning You too, must have felt as humble, as grateful as I do. Just the little things the absence of commercials of high music, the presence of grave, sincere, heartfelt mourning have made me feel how close each man is to his neighbor, those on the same street and those thousands of miles away. I knelt down during the minute of silent prayer on The Breakfust Club program

Those who think they should pity my generation are so very wrong True, we are becoming adults in a changing world where we are growing up not because we want to but because we are forced to We are growing into adults in a world of sor row, death and cruelty the meanest, poor est side of man is all around u. But we are also, and more important growing up in a time when we can see also the best of man brought out. We are surrounded by bravery, courage and determination, man accomplishing that which even he thought was impossible.

This lesson of greatness we shall carry with us through life. That is why I say those who are sorry for us are wrong

We are learning at the beginning of our lives what many go to the grave without learning

I guess this is a very solemn letter, but today is a solemn day for us all

same, whe to me to liets and will knock our garbage cans over and run the streets and how all night, but if an 8-year old boy or girl does it, all the samtly women in the neighborhood will call the police station, a dozen cruising cars will immediately appear on the scene, the culprit will be apprehended and he or she will be warned that unless he or she improves his or her way, he or she will be sent to the reformatory school, from which he or she will graduate, after a two-year course, as an accomplished criminal.

And, of course, on Hallowe'en, on the Fourth of July and on all joyous holidays, the police chief will receive his orders to call out all cruisers, all police motorcycles, all policeman and all police reserves to patrol, for 24 hours, the city, and to arrest any child who laughs or who as much as puts a spec of soap on a Main Street window – and the police, much to their disgust, will have to carry out the order.

And, in our playgrounds, some bigger boys will push open the bath house doors, and some poor little girl will stand humiliated and naked before a gang of insulting boys while the too young supervisors are strolling around or are helpless to protect the younger children. Of course, proper supervision would mean higher salaries, and the big boys must keep taxes down regardless and the Women's Club can't be bothered while they are peacefully enjoying a talk on sending money to China relief or on how to make paper dolls in 57 varieties.

Boucher? Oh! I almost forgot him, He's getting his trailer, his aluminum boat and motor ready to take his wife, four daughters and son on outings. He has a great time with them. They run like deer, swim like fish and like the big shots in Concord, he can afford to drive out where there is clean, cool, wholesome water. He says that if the fathers and mothers of Concord can't stand up and fight for their children, he doesn't see why he should.

A midnight raid

This was the lead story in the Monitor on Sept. 14, 1929, during Prohibition. It ran under the large all-capitalized three-deck headline "Midnight raid nets over 600 bottles of liquor in two homes."

Two night raids made shortly before midnight last night on Rumford and Franklin streets, by Officer Thomas Andrews, investigator for Merrimack County, and Patrolman Jess McIsaac netted what authorities believed today to be the biggest haul in the annals of this county and possibly in the state.

More than 600 quart bottles of beer and wine, 10 gallons of mash, six gallon jugs of beer and wine, 450 empty bottles, eight 50-gallon barrels, four 30-gallon barrels, two 20-gallon barrels and two capping machines in addition to various other types of paraphernalia for manufacture of intoxicating liquor comprise the haul which the two officers made. It was one of the finest coups on local record, coming as the result of a well-planned and neatly executed march which prohibition men stole on the bootleggers.

The first raid occurred early in the evening, at the residence of Alfred Perron at 204 Rumford street, the second at the house of Mrs. Anse Paglia at 66 Franklin street shortly before midnight. Within an hour or so after Officers McIsaac and Andrews had started on their quest a big truck, piled high with the confiscated liquors and equipment, rumbled down through the almost deserted Main street to the police station where today it is stored in the cellar awaiting disposition by authorities.

At the Franklin street house a party, in which only men figured, was in progress when the officers made their raid. At neither of the two places was there any disturbance during the raids.

The two arrested by the officers were arraigned this morning in police court before Judge William L. Stevens. Each was charged with illegal possession. County Solicitor Willoughby Colby prosecuted. Mrs. Paglia was fined $150, costs of $30 and given a suspended sentence of 90 days in the house of correction. Perron was fined $75, costs of $15 and given a suspended sentence of 90 days in the house of correction.

DAD, THE WAR GOVERNOR

Y FATHER, DR. ROBERT O. BLOOD, WAS A SELF-MADE MAN. A HORATIO ALGER TYPE. One of seven children born to a poor railroad family in Enfeld, he rose to be governor of New Hampshire during World War II.

Dad graduated from Dartmourn Medical School in 1913 and was a practicing physician when he married in 1916 and moved to Concord. He served as a doctor with the Yankee Division during World War I. On his return, he was honored with a hero's parade down Main Street. He rode a horse, wearing his Army captain's uniform of jodhpurs and puttees.

Robert O. helped to establish the American Legion in New Hampshire and probably developed his interest in politics from his Legion activities. Someone has told me Dad said, "Someday I'm activities. Someone has told me Dad said.

'Someday I'm going to be governor of New Hampshire.' He must have had a lifelong going to be governor of New Hampshire." He must have had a lifelong plan.

He was president of the state Senate in 1939 when he decided to run for governor. I drove him on campaign trips in 1940 to meet voters in every nook and valley of the state. We drove 25,000 miles that summer, mostly at night after he had put in a full day's work. He had a special board platform constructed to fit into the back seat of our sedan to make a bed so that he could sleep while I drove home.

He won a close race and won re-election in 1942. During his second term I remember driving the governor's limousine, a big black LaSalle sedan with a stren. It was too great a temptation not to blow that siren when we were way out in the country, where no one would hear it. But I seldom blew it when Dad was in the car.

The selling of war bonds brought many interesting people to New Hampshire, whom the Bloods entertained in their home at 25 Auburn St. Lord and Lady Halifax of England came with their son, who was in a wheelchair, having lost both legs in the African campaign. The Bloods played host to Eleanor Roosevelt and Lowell Thomas. At a war bond rally at the Manchester Armory, I had the pleasure of dancing with Bette Davis. She left a smudge of lipstick on my tuxedo lapel; it wasn't removed for years.

The day after Pearl Harbor, my Dartmouth College roommate, Rogers Blood of Manchester, packed his bags and joined the Marines. He died at Eniwitok. By mistake, the notice of his death came to the governor's office. The sender thought Rogers Blood was Dad's son. Actually he was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert M. Blood of Manchester. Dad immediately drove to Manchester to let the Bloods know about the death of their son.

Time to buy

The stock market had been reeling for weeks when it crashed on Oct. 29. 129 Late that week the market closed for two days to cool off. Optimistic and resolute in the face of chaos. Monitor editor James M. Langley wrote this editorial on Oct. 31 under the headline "Time to buy."

Few doubt the time is at hand to buy securities which pay dividends. The speculative stampede has definitely deflated stock values to a point close to or below their conservative worth. The values based upon possible future earnings, which have held so long, have been obliterated. Business itself is closing its greatest year, a year in which actual earnings exceed any this country has ever before known. Inventories are low

The speculative boom had to come to an end, and it has Thousands had taken unwarranted profits this year prior to the crash of quoted values, and such investors should at once reinvest if they care anything for restoration of order in a chaotic situation which might through hysteria permit national sentiment to become as gloomy as it has been opti-

The Federal Reserve tried to prevent the continued swelling of the quoted values bubble, and possibly partially succeeded, for the slight recession which anticipated by weeks the ultimate collapse of futuristic values started at about the moment the Reserve Board publicly protested the boom orgy. The Federal Reserve has been quite powerless to assist in making the sought for recession in quoted values an orderly deflation, however, and one begins to wonder whether this Federal machinery as now constructed is capable of serving fully its fundamental function of keeping the financial pendulum swinging in a restricted arc

Common knowledge exists of a person here and a person there who has suffered in the speculative collapse. But, as Dr. Klein has pointed out, these unfortunates are but a very small percentage of us all, and their loss of buying power temporarily cannot have any very noticeable effect upon consuming power. Count up such cases and they do not number more than one's fingers as against the scores and even hundreds of persons one has knowledge of who are in no way affected.

A very few there are who appear to be emotionally concerned about general business. This is no time for emotion. The best season of the year lies just ahead. Christmas is sold to the whole public more thoroughly than any other season in the year, and some upheaval far more terrific than that which has affected the superficial world of speculation, and paper profits not taken by investors, will be required to make any dent worth noticing in November and December volume.

Chief of police protests Quinn's alleged attempt to trap Monitor editor

This was the lead story in the July 11, 1967. Concord Monitor It ran under the headline "Chief of police protests Quinn's alleged attempt to trap Monitor editor." The Quinn was Concord's mayor. J. Herbert Quinn, and the events related in the story brought about his impeachment later that summer. The late Jeanne Quimby, the paper's longtime city hall reporter, wrote the story.

Police Chief Walter H. Carlson sent a stiff protest to Mayor Quinn today for an alleged Quinn attempt to trap the editor of the Concord Monitor on a drunken driving charge.

The incident referred to by Carlson was apparently the basis for the Board of Aldermen action last night setting up a four-member committee to investigate "the recent incident involving Mayor Quinn, the Police Department and the Brick Tower Motel Carlson's letter to the mayor said that "your attempt to embarrass the editor of a local paper (James M. Langley) by ordering an officer of this department to station himself outside a local motel to wait for the editor to emerge with his car, onto a pub-lic highway so he could be arrested for drunken driving, borders on the repulsive As long as I am head of the Concord Police Department, we will not be browbeaten or intimidated into the use of shabby enforcement habits regardless of where the orders come from," Carlson said

At a press conference this morning, Mayor Quinn acknowledged he did call the police department June 28.

"And I will again if any occasion arises, whomever the individual may be, whether the editor of the local paper, a member of the Board of Aldermen or anyone else.

Police said this morning the Mayor called the department on the evening of June 28 and asked that an officer and police cruiser meet him at Rollins Park.

The Mayor and Officer Donald Ash then went to the Brick Tower Motel on South Main St. and waited. Police quoted the Mayor as telling the officer they were waiting for Monitor editor Langley who was expected to drive out of the motel parking lot momentarily

Police said the Mayor wanted Langley arrested on a charge of dri-

However, after the Mayor had checked at the motel desk, police said he returned to the police cruiser and reported that Langley wasn't

Police quoted the Mayor as saying the incident was "all set up for today," and that it was the fault of "that G-- d--- Morey" (police Capt. Richard J. Morey) for sending a cruiser too late to spring the trap.

Police said the Mayor warned Ash not to report the incident to his superiors but to fabricate a story about a minor altercation at Rollins

Motel employees were quoted by police as saying they never had seen editor Langley in a condition that would warrant drunken driving

Alderman Allen R. Wiren last night told the Board of Aldermen he

Quinn said he had "no comment." Alderman David E. Tardif then made a motion that Aldermen Robert D. Branch, Clyde E. Wilber and Edna C. McKenna be appointed as an aldermanic committee with Alderman Wiren as chairman to con-

When I arrived at the village, Cousin Gertrude took the two heavy books down from the mantel and pointed out a bookmark she had inserted. She opened the second volume at page 1,300-and-something and was enormously pleased to point out her father's name. I looked at it and I couldn't believe my eyes. On the open page opposite the one she had found was my father's name. Two thick volumes, over 1,500 pages, unknown numbers of people, and these two names were facing each other

MUHAMMAD ALI

HEN YOU'RE LITTLE, YOU DON'T REALLY WONDER WHO YOU ARE. But when I was about 12 years old, I figured out I was an American, and I knew what that meant. My thanks go to Muhammad Ali because by his actions, I got to be part of a little piece of American history in the making.

It was probably 1971. I was a tourist with my family in Washington, D.C. In the lobby of our hotel I saw a long line of children in front of a large, humble-looking man sitting awkwardly in a too-small chair.

"It's Cassius Clay," my dad said, gently pushing me to get in line. For some reason, we were there to pay homage to this man. The atmosphere was reverent, and I kept quiet and obeyed even though I didn't know what I was in line for.

When I came face to face with him, I handed him my crumpled piece of paper. "Ask him for his autograph," instructed my dad. Mr. Ali patiently signed his name to my scrap of paper. Although he didn't take me upon his knee, he had that kind of kindness about him.

Years later I learned it was Muhammad Ali, the man who floated like a butterfly and stung like a bee, whose signature was on a slip of paper in my scrapbook. Much later I learned he was not in D.C. as a boxer that day. Ali was there to fight the draft because as he once said. "I ain't got no quarrel with them Vietcong.

I was only 12 at the time and had seen all the sights, but what I remember most about my trip to D.C. was a soft boxer's hand of a powerful man doing something very American that had nothing to do with sports. It had to do with all that Washington, D.C., stood for. On that day, I understood what it meant to be an American, and that heroes came in any color.

'In 100 years I think the world will be really different'

The Monitor asked second- and third-graders from the Boscawen Elementary School what they thought life would be like in the next century. Here is a sampling of their responses. Thanks to all the children for their participation.

Here is what I think it will be like in 100 years.

There will be a big giant boot that you climb into with big springs. You tell the boot where you want to go, like Florida, and it shoots you

A car that drives by itself with a computer in it that shoots out food.

My mom thinks there will be no grocery stores. You shop at home. My dad thinks there will be flying

My grampa think there will be computerized cars that drive themselves and no more accidents.

- Brooke Boulton

It would be weird. It would be . . a lot of new cars, ships and airplanes. I would like it because there might be something from the unknown. Maybe just maybe . . ALIENS!!

- Tyler Reagan

We will live on Venus and ride on space scooters and wear space clothes all the time. We will live in bubbles with the cities in them.

- Joe Burleigh

The cars would drive for you. Some refrigerator could have ice cream come out of it. We could float instead of walking or flying or driving. Our teachers could pump smarts into us kids.

- Kyle Jenkins

In 100 years it will be really different I think the cars will be flying. There will be new toys. There will be new stuff invented. A lot of new colors, too. We will discover a new species of animal. We will find a new galaxy. Who knows? It can't be known until then!

- Linsey Galliher

I think cars will fly. Clothes will be different. Buildings will be different. Houses will be different. Schools will be different. I think Boscawen will still be small. There will be less animals.

- Jeffrey Dunlap

I think the cars will be flying objects. I think people will be traveling by weird cars that look like airplanes. I think classrooms will have desks that have chairs hooked on them. I think Boscawen will still be a small town.

- Courtney Binette

In 100 years I think cars will fly and cry. They would have personali-

Everyone would have a box. You will press a button on the box, and it would transform into a house. Houses would also fly. Sidewalks would be connected to houses. You could buy sneakers that fly, but you have to buy the clothes, gloves and hats (in order to fly). When you call someone you could see them.

For kids in the middle of each town, a slide and ladder made of soft stuff would connect their house to a huge playground in the middle. On the computer when you chat on line you can see the person that you are chatting to. You could talk to people on cartoons that are on TV with a microphone and they could talk back. Last but not least, you could have a place in every town where it would be winter every day.

- Jillian Kerchen

I think that the town of Boscawen will be extremely populated and big. I also think the classrooms will be full of children. I think that cars will be computerized. I think people will be traveling in cars that look like spaceships. They still drive on the road.

On a more local level, McLeod said he'd include a First Night 2000 button, a roster of artists who had visited the McDowell colony (the oldest and biggest artist colony in the country) and a Robert Frost poem in his time capsule.

Or how about Udder pants' Agriculture Commissioner Steve Taylor, who had just completed an article outlining the 10 most important events in New Hampshire agriculture and rural life, had plenty of ideas for his time capsule. A milking machine (or a picture of one) would be a good symbol of the vital technological and regulatory changes in the dairy industry, he said.

His pitch for technology was echoed by others as well. Like McLeod, Valene Lynn. vice president of the Greater Concord Chamber of Commerce, put a microchip on her list - along with sticky notes

"Things have moved so fast," she said I was happy to get sticky notes, and then voice mail came along . . . someone said to me, 'When you go to bed at night and get up in the morning, you're already eight hours behind, that's how fast things " she said

Maybe that's the reason people have a hard time deciding on time capsule contents - it's difficult to select a few symbolic items from such a huge scope

Beardsley said he'd already given a little thought to the idea after watching a Good Morning America episode on the subject of time capsules. "I couldn't think of anything then either," he said, "It's tough to pick out one thing."

Even Mayor Bill Veroneau, who's

I think there will be more houses and less trees. There will be a lot more people. I think Boscawen will be BIG! I also think there will be less animals because people eat animals. I think they will still have TVs. I think people will be traveling in cars, planes, trains, bikes, boats. I also think classrooms will be a lot bigger, have a lot more stuff. I think there will be a lot more laws. There will be some new inventions. There will be more jobs and more workers. They will need more water and firemen and policemen. They will need more mailmen for at Christmas. They will have electric cars. I also think there will be space buggies that will take you to the moon. I think there will be lots and lots of buildings. There will be lots of stores. They will need lots of hospitals. They will need more schools for children to learn. They will need more food and clothes. That's what I think!

- Laura Egounis

I think there will be more buildings and not a lot of trees. Boscawen will be bigger and have a lot of houses and buildings. The class will be really big. The books will get longer. People will be traveling in cars and trucks. Cars will cost a lot. Prices will go up.

Boscawen will stay a small town. Individual meals can be chosen by pushing a button with a number on it. People will talk on television. Phones will be gone. Trees and water will be plentiful.

Family traditions will continue.

– Kristopher-Morgan Ethan Ord-

In 100 years from now I think cars will be a lot different. They might be slower so people don't speed. Maybe people will just go slower on their own. People might travel in smaller airplanes. They should be a little bit faster.

I think airports should be closer. Maybe they will be closer. Classrooms will probably be bigger because there will (might) be more kids.

Schools could be bigger to fit all the kids. Maybe some schools might have recess at the same time. Maybe kids will listen and be like they should. I think Boscawen will be bigger. It is very small now.

I think they will have a lot of houses and businesses. I think there will be many new inventions that will change the way we live. I don't think there will be any farms

I think computers will be like TVs and everybody will have one in their house. I think every student will have a computer on their desk in school.

My teacher will be 133 years old. I don't think there will be many wild animals around except in zoos or national parks. I think doctors will find curs for many sicknesses.

I'm happy that I am living now because they might not have things I enjoy 100 years from now.

motorcycle. I think skateboards can move in the air. I think mail will be transported. I think everything will be powered by itself.

- Spencer Meredith

In 100 years I think they will have cars that will fly. In 100 years Boscawen might have a shopping mall. Stores might be 10 times bigger than they are now. They might find a way to cure AIDS. They might have better spaceships. They might find new planets. They might have a different animal.

- Sarah Supry

This is what I think it will be like in 100 years. It will be that a car will be a spaceship. People will be traveling by a spaceship that has a lever to steer. In a classroom the desks will have two holes. One is for a computer. Two is for a calculator. On the phone you can see who you are talking to. I think that Boscawen will be the capital of New Hampshire. People will work on the moon.

- Kelsey Plaisted

Cars will be like spaceships. People will travel by flying or swiming. Classrooms will be like a shape of a smile face or up in the sky. Boscawen will be a big town in 100 years. The U.S. might be busy—like more traffic, more people, more things. There will be different sizes of puzzles. There will be different kinds of drinks and food. There will be different kinds of cups. There will be different kinds of chairs.

– Katie Lemieux

In 100 years there might be flying cars. There might be a new fun spot for children. There might be a new kind of candy. There might be a huge school with 50 classrooms. There might be more than 100,000,000 children in the world. There might be more than 1,000,000 adults in the world in the world.

When you talk on the phone, you might be able to see who you're talking to. There might be a new kind of animal, food and drinks.

- Brittany Clark

In 100 years from now everyone will live underground. Some people will live on space stations. Cars will not run on gas. They will run by the sun. There will not be books. Everything will be on computers. Boscawen will be a medium-sized city.

Ryan Searah

In 100 years cars will be flying. The classrooms will be under the ocean. People will travel by skates that will have jet motors. Boscawen will be bigger because it will be part of Concord in 100 years.

- Carrie Breau

I think people would live in big cities. Boscawen will still be a small town. There will be less food. There will be more people. Houses will be closer together. There will be big gadgets. Cars will run off electricity. The United States will be bigger. You would do multiplication instead of adding. You will use electricity a lot.

Jamie Aznive

This is what it will be like in 100 years. There will be very fancy cars. There will be solar planes and cars. The classes will be very old. Boscawen will still be small. Things will be very expensive. They will get their Christmas trees from the woods. Computers will be very famous. Thee will be spaceships. People will still love N.H.

- Jeannett Hardy

I think cars will have computers in them. I think people might be traveling by air jets. I think classrooms will be much bigger than today.

I think Boscawen will be bigger than today because more people will be here and there will be more buildings.

I think skateboards will have jet packs.

I think roller skates will have hyper-boosters. I think chipmunks will be extinct. I think mail will be transported in by itself. I think everything that is with a plug will be powered by itself. I think aliens will rule the world.

- T.J. Supry

I think in 100 years the cars will be different because they will be driven by computers. You will type in where you want to go and the car will take you there.

Even Mayor Bill Veroneau, who putting together a family time capsule, was stumped when it came to choosing items for Concord. "That's a weighty question," he said.

He quickly concluded, though, what he wouldn't bury with the other treasures. "It probably would not occur to me to put a picture of the city council in there," he said

With a little more thought. Veroneau decided a copy of the city's current master plan, along with its soon-to-be-developed 2020 Vision initiative (outlining how Concord will ideally look in 20 years), would make nice additions to the capsule. That would offer a comparison of how the city really is then, with how we thought it should have looked, "he said

His theme of progress was also a popular one. Lynn said she, too, would include a 2020 Vision plan. "It gives you sort of a roadway," she said

But not everyone's ideas of progress the same. "I'd put a water sample of the Merrimack River when the mills were here, and a sample of it now," said Beardsley's buddy, Dick Schaefer, of Contococod to the traffic on Loudon Road."

Taylor's list, too, emphasized posture progress. He'd include, among other things, a label from a grain bag, to show the importance of regulation of fertilizers and feeds, a Macintosh apple to symbolize the perfection of controlled atmosphere fruit storage systems, and a picture of a tractor to symbolize the invention of the internal combustion engine.

If Taylor's comprehensive list puts most of us to shame, he's not the only on who's eagerly swallowed the time capsule concept. Search the World Wide Web and you'll find dozens of companies peddling time capsule packages, mostly specially designed containers for families to fill with keepsakes and bury in the ground or stash in an atte.

One Arkansas organization has put together an ambitious United States online time capsule, where browsers can click on an icon for their state and reserve a capsule for filling with electronic memo-

Of New Hampshire's 40 online "capsules," only five are reserved, and none contain anything yet

But it's not too late to start digging. After all, cyberspace may be sunny, but around here the ground's frozen

And digging up ideas doesn't have to be that hard. Six-year-old Jessica Diversi didn't know what a time capsule was until last week.

But once she figured it out, she had plenty of ideas for filling it.

Alongside the mayor's master plan, the microchips and newspapers, Diversi and her sister would tuck some Backstreet Boys CDs, along with tunes from some 98-Degrees and Shania Twain.

"Oh, and an E-Z Bake Oven," Diversi

And why not?

As Lynn put it, "You can't go anywhere till you know where you've come from."

And who can measure what manner of memories were created in E-Z Bake Ovens?

That reminds Williamson that when he was born, on July 8, 1911, his mother was a patient of Concord's first woman doctor.

"In those days all the doctors were men and they refused to grant her privileges at the hospital," he said. "So the women of the city railied and started their own hospital, the Women's Memorial Hospital on South Street." Today, the former women's hospital building is the site of the state Department of Revenue Administration.

Convinced Concord could support only one hospital. Monitor Publisher Jim Langley led a 1946 campaign to combine the women's hospital with the Margaret Pillsbury Hospital, which served both men and women. The union became what is now Concord Hospital. Williamson later served as a hospital trustee for 18 years.

Often sick as a child. Williamson was among those who fell ill during the world-wide influenza epidemic of World War I. He was in bed and recovering when crowds gathered to mark the end of the war with a spontaneous celebration downtown. He could hear the commotion almost a mile

"There was great deal of celebration, the ringing of church bells, people cheering and a huge crowd all over Main Street." he said. "I really wanted to go down there, but my parents wouldn't let me out of the house."

He attended Concord High School, and his 1928 yearbook lists him as "the quietest boy in class." Among the school's top scholars, he excelled at French and won the prestigious Harvard Book Prize.

Often, he stayed up late at night, studying to the sounds of the family's first radio, a 1920 Chelsea, which he still owns. Built before transistors, the Chelsea is about the size of an average television set today, and its receiver operated on five bulky vacuum tubes, each of which had to be tuned individually to receive one station.

Dean had to run it with batteries the first few years, because his home was not yet wired for electricity.

While he was quiet in high school. Williamson did an about-face at UNH in Durham, joining a popular fraternity, working in a variety of student organizations, playing intramural hockey and tennis and earning a varsity letter as head cheerleader his senior year. Decades later, he was named a university trustee, and the school named a dormitory after him.

"Tve had a lot of good years, but I have to say that the four years I spent at UNH were the happiest four years I've had in one continuous stretch like that." Williamson said.

But it was not all fun. His class had the unfortunate timing of attending school during the 1929 stock market crash that started the Great Depression.

"It affected enrollment substantially, because so many just couldn't afford the tuition any longer," he said. "Frankly, I wouldn't be surprised if the class shrunk as much as 25 percent... I was one of about three members of my graduating class who knew I had a job when I graduated."

During college, Williamson worked sum-crowd all over Main Street. I really wanted to go down there, but my parents wouldn't let me out in the louse mers for the Manufacturers and Merchants Mutual Insurance Co. on Pleasant Street, where his father was a cierk. When Williamson graduated, president Charles Jackman asked him to return for a full-time sob

Williamson will be forever grateful. He stayed with the company 44 years, moving up to treasurer and returing as president at age 65. He continues to serve as a director.

He and his wife married in December 1933 and had two children, Saran and Dean "Dassett" Williamson.

Moving to a house high up on Frankian Street, he and Holen had a clear view across the Merrimack River to Concord Airport, where they could water array air corps pilots practice during World War II. After Pearl Harbor was bombed, Wilhamson himself tried to enlist in the service several times, but he was turned down because he had flat feet.

So he joined a civilian reserve corps, called the Sea Scouts, and trained in military discipline, weapons and maneuvers. For years later, he also volunteered as several boxs camps throughout the state.

It frustrated and saddened Williams in to see so many of his Concord friends and classmates leave for the war, and never return. To this day, he still won't purchase a Jananese-made car.

Williamson is a reflective man, but it still surprises him when he thinks of all the world-aitering. Concord-shaping history he's seen unfold before his eyes, even over the more recent decades since World War II ended.

Space exploration, civil rights, rock music, the turbulent '60s, television, modern appliances, political elections – he delights in the detailed, personal aneedotes that bring them to all to vivid life.

"Shheewww! There's only one word to describe it all." he said. "Incredible!"

Still Williamson embraces change, saying most of the technical innovations, social shifts and political upheaval he's witnessed has been, and is, for the better. When they happen, he said, big historical events are sometimes hard to imagine, always impossible to forget.

"Take the moon landing," Williamson said. "Even though we were sitting right here, it was hard to believe it was actually happening, Amazing.

"And all I can say about the future is one word – unpredictable." he said. "The future will be unpredictable, but it's fascinating to see how it all happens."

Sports CENTURY EDITION

THROUGH THE YEARS

the 'Monitor' sports staff recalls some of his favorite local stories.

The veteran of

he Monitor sports department has had opportunities to cover some bigtime events through my 15 years at the paper.

In 1998, sports editor Sandy Smith covered Olympian Tara Mounsey in Japan, and last year, sports writer Yuri Pride took us through the University of New Hampshire hockey team's ride to national prominence.

Recently, Scott Lauber returned from New Jersey, where he chronicled Matt Bonner's performance for the nationally-ranked University of Florida men's basketball team.

I've also had several chances to cover some big-time events, such as the American League Championship Series last October between the Red Sox and Yankees, and spring training down in Florida a few years back.

Through it all, though, I've learned that the best stories aren't necessarily the big stories. The best stories, more often than not, are the human stories.

They're not always happy slices of life, but they touch something within us and take us far away from statistics and athleticism.

With that in mind, and in the spirit of the millennium celebrations, here are my favorites, year by year, since I landed in Concord way back when.

Bishop Brady graduate Bruce Gillies, the starting goalie for the University of New Hampshire hockey team, was the 1984-85 pre-season Hockey East Player of the Year and my first big assignment.

Cover Gillies during a home game at Snively Arena. Watch him shut down the other team and fulfill his promise. Local boy does good sort of thing. That's not the way it worked out, though. Gillies got lit up by Boston University in what amounted to a disappointing season for the big goalie.

Afterward, I walked into the UNH locker room to interview Gillies and found him sitting alone on a long bench, still in his uniform,

That's not the way it worked out, though. Gillies got lit up by Boson University in what amounted to a disappointing season for the big goalic.

Afterward, I walked into the UNH locker room to interview Gillies and found him sitting alone on a long bench, still in his uniform, staring at the ground.

I remember thinking how big Gillies was, a tall, wide giant with long blond hair, stringy from a tough night's work, flowing beyond his neckline. I remember worrying that the wrong question might set off the big fella, that he might stuff me into one of the locker cubicles and fire a few slapshots my way.

That never happened. When I introduced myself as a sports writer from his local paper, Gillies smiled, stuck out his hand and welcomed me into his athletic life.

He spoke about disappointment and hope for the future, and when he was through revealing his feelings and making me feel comfortable, once again he smiled and stuck out his hand.

It's something I never forgot.

Eagles have little insight

Johnson's running ability is a surprise to BC

The Associated Press

TUCSON, Ariz Colorado prepared for Boston College tailback Cedric Washington Too bad BC didn't do some homework on the Buffaloes' Cortien Johnson.

Johnson had a career-best 201 of Colorado's 365 rushing yards and scored two touchdowns in a 62-28 rout of the 25th-ranked Eagles yesterday in the Insight.com Bowl

"I can't take all the credit." Johnson said "The offensive line did a great job of opening up the holes, and the wide receivers were blocking well downfield."

Boston College (8-4) was unable to overcome Colorado's speed.

linebacker and DB corps I've played against," said Washington, a 1.122-yard rusher who was held to 30 yards in 16 attempts. "The holes were closing up like that, in a sec-

Johnson had 34 yards on Colorado's first drive to set up his 10vard scoring run, then contributed 30 yards in the second possession, which ended with quarterback Mike Moschetti's 2-yard TD.

Johnson gained 40 yards in three carries before his own 2-yard scoring run that made it 42-7 with 5:59 left in the half

A sophomore in his first year as a starter, Johnson had 137 yards in

"I think that's one of the fastest - the first half, more than in any game of his career save the 185 he gained against Iowa State

"I was surprised we ran the ball as well as we did," Colorado Coach Gary Barnett said. "Cortlen really started to turn it on as the year went on. He kept looking better and better his last five or six games, and we became a better team.

"At the half, we agreed that we were going to take it one play at a time and play physical," Boston College coach Tom O'Brien said. 'We knew there wasn't going to be much opportunity to come back by halftime

Ben Kelly set an Insight.com record with an 88-yard punt return, and the Buffs (7-5) scored on interception returns of 29 yards by Jashon Sykes and 21 yards by Rashidi Barnes.

It was Colorado's sixth consecutive postseason victory

The Eagles got their first TD on a 78-yard interception return by George White, and the last on a 4 vard return of a blocked punt by Doug Bessette with 5:55 to play.

Boston College also scored in the third when William Green fumbled into the end zone on a 1-yard run, and tight end Bryan Arndt recovered, and on a 2-vard pass from Tim Hasselbeck to Jamal

The most one-sided result in the bowl's 11-year history was Kansas State's 52-17 victory over Wyoming

Concord pins Pinkerton, Souhegan

From Monitor staff reports

The Concord High wrestling team continued its fast start to the season vesterday, beating both Pinkerton (69-10) and Souhegan (58-15) in convincing fashion.

The victories, coming on the heels of the Crimson Tide's victory in the Framingham (Mass.) Christmas Tournament, bring Concord's dual-meet record to 5-0.

Crandall Dyment (130 pounds) and Bryan Alisop (119) were the Tide's only double winners on the mats. Dyment won both his matches by technical fall. He beat his Pinkerton opponent, 22-7, then topped Souhegan, 19-1. All sop won by pins in 5:00 and

James Warriner (215) won by pin in 12 seconds and picked up a forfeit win, and Chrigus Boezeman (275) won by pin in 54 seconds and also won a match by forfeit. Mapolo Buessing took a pair of victories by default at 103 pounds.

GAME FACTS: Badgers Heisman-winning RB Ron Dayne (1.834 rushing, 19 TDs) should have fun pounding on smallish Cardinal front seven Team has flourished since freshman OB Brooks Bollinger (1,455 total offense, 8 TD passes, 5 TD runs, only 2 ints, in 126 passes) became starter (7 straight wins averaging 37 points per game). CB Jamar Fletcher (led Big Ten with 7 ints., 2 TD returns), LB Donnell Thompson pace solid defense (5th in nation in scoring, 13.2) while WR Nick Davis (led Big Ten in kickoff returns, 26.2, 2 TDs, 1 TD punt return) is terrific return man. Cardinal rode explosive offense (5th in nation in total offense, 467.1, 6th in scoring, 37.2) to first Pac-10 title since 1971. But WR Troy Walters (Biletnikoff-award winner, 74 catches, 10 TDs) is out after dislocating wrist in practice. So OB Todd Husak (2,689 passing, 18 TDs, 11 ints.) will rely on WRs DeRonnie Pitts (58 catches, 8 TDs), David Davis (30 catches, 5 TDs) to stretch Badgers secondary. Soft defense must stack line to stop Dayne.

Glenn drops appeal of suspension

Carroll says he wouldn't have played even if it was overturned

The Associated Press

FOXBORO, Mass. The issue was moot anyway. New England Patriots coach Pete Carroll said wide receiver Terry Glenn wouldn't play Sunday even if his suspension were overturned.

Any chance that he would be reinstated through arbitration ended Glenn Thursday when it was decided that there was not enough time for the NFL Players Association and the NFL Management Council, the owners' group, to hold a hearing before the game.

Glenn then withdrew his appeal. Glenn's agent, James Gould, had requested an expedited arbitration hearing after Carroll suspended his top wide receiver for tomorrow's against the Baltimore Ravens for not meeting with team medical personnel on three days.

"He's not playing in this game," Carroll said before the appeal was dropped.

Unless Carroll withdraws that (suspension). Terry will not be allowed to play the final game of the season." Gould said before learning a hearing wouldn't

He said Carroll's decision was "incomprehensible," but the coach defended it on Thursday, the day after he made it. "I don't have any reservation about it, no second thought at all," Carroll said, adding that team owner Robert Kraft was "complete-season finale at home ly supportive of my decision."

Carroll said he suspended Glenn because the player, who was excused from practice last Friday and Saturday because of the flu. didn't meet with club medical personnel Saturday night, Monday and Tuesday.

After Glenn didn't report to the team hotel Saturday night, Carroll decided not to activate him for last Sunday's home game against Buffalo. Gould said that Patriots trainer Ron O'Neil called Glenn at home Saturday and told him Carroll would like him to go to the hotel and that Glenn responded that he wasn't feeling well

Gould believed Glenn, with a fever of 102, indicated to O'Neil he would show up if his condition improved.

he just stayed in bed," Gould said.

"It was a gray enough area that "He couldn't figure out why Pete was trying to make a federal case out of the flu.

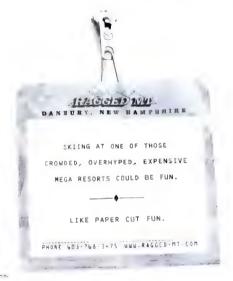

He also said Glenn called O'Neil at home and at Foxboro Stadium on Sunday morning, asking to play against Buffalo, and was told Carroll wanted him to stay home.

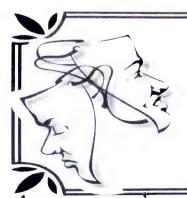

After the 13-10 loss, defensive end Willie McGinest and other players criticized Glenn for missing the

"They had no right to take shots at my character," Glenn said in an interview with The Boston Globe. "There are some guys who feel they have to be the leader, but you don't see it on the field as much as you see it from their mouths.

Gould said he had met with Glenn and Carroll in the past about other issues and received "hundreds" of calls from Carroll.

"We'd always been able to talk through things and communicate and this is one time he didn't have the decency to call me," Gould said.

Again Cross Bats in Contest for World Championship

Boston Went into Game Today With Score Two to One in Her Favor.

The Associated Press

BOSTON - The dispute over the players' share of the World Series receipts overshadowed in interest early today the arrangements for today's game between the Boston Americans and the Chicago Nationals, the sixth in the series in which Boston led three games

The crux of the trouble is in the small attendance at the games, both here and in Chicago, coupled with the lower prices at which tickets were sold this year. The total receipts of the first four games amounted to $128,755. This is not sufficient to pay the World Series players the amount which they assert was practically guaranteed - $2,000 to each member of the winning team and $1,400 to each member of the losers and at the same time provide for the shares of the leagueleading clubs, the National Commission, the umpires, and the teams which finished second. third and fourth in the league races. The total players' share of the receipts is $69,527.70. The Boston and Chicago players insist that the innovation whereby other clubs in the first division of the two leagues share in the profits of the series be abrogated, if necessary, rather than the actual participants should have their receipts cut down.

The commission yesterday took the position that it was without authority to change the plan for division of receipts, which had been adopted by the two leagues, but some sort of adjustment seemed to have been made today.

It was Friday night in the Bronx, Yankees against Brewers. Tewksbury, a 25-year-old Penacook native, was pitching in his first major league

It was. He pitched 713 innings, yielded two runs and was the pitcher of record in New York's 3-2 victory. But he could have given up a zillion runs and it probably would have been worthwhile for the many family and friends who drove or flew to New York to see him.

After five years in the minors, the kid they love, grew up with and played high school ball with was on top.

Tewksbury's 21-year-old sister, Roxanne, and brother Shawn, 13, were there with his mother and step-father. Dave Anderson, his coach at Merrimack Valley High School, was there. His Concord roommate, Dale Emerson, was there

Friends and family, 28 in all, huddled together in three rows. They wore winter coats, gloves and hats to combat the nearfreezing temperatures. Their shouts of encouragement never stopped.

Hockey Club Presents Its Famous Member With A Traveling Bag at Banquet - Hears Inside Story Of 1932 Winter Olymipcs

By RUEL N. COLBY

Before a small group of personal friends among whom were most of his teammates on the Concord Hockey club, gathered informally to do him honor for having scaled Olympic heights, Douglas N. Everett, member of the U.S. hockey team in the recent international games at Lake Placid last night told "the boys" of what went on at this III Olympic winter sports competi-

The occasion for Everett's first semi-public appearance since his return from the history-making games which come only once every four years, was the banquet ten-dered him by the Hockey club at Nardini's restaurant.

Friends Pay Him Tribute

His version of the winter Olympics which for a period of 10 days had the eyes of the sports world focused on that little New York hamlet, came as the climax to a series of brief tributes paid him by

They gave him a unique ovation and he rapaid them by painting a verbal picture of the Olympic panorama, a story unadorned and without sentiment, but chockful of vivid, intimate revelations. Some of the things he said weren't for publication. They were candid facts about international sportsmanship that might well be the basis, some day, of a treatise on amateurism. To those fortunate enough to hear him the dinner goes down as one of the most significant events of the year in Concord sports

Brown and the Fire Dept. Speak Toastmaster Richard "Dick" Brown of the State Highway department, whose chief commissioner is Doug's father, opened the short speaking program following the dinner with a characteristically witty speech in which he lauded Everett's achievement, his fine sportsmanship, his modesty and his capacity for "playing the game." George Arthur Foster, business associate of Doug's and a competent after-dinner speaker, was then called on, being introduced as the Concord Fire department, responding with several anecdotes of Everett's entry into the business life of the community, and concluding with an analysis of what Everett's participation in the Olympiad has meant for Concord.

Put Concord On Sport Map

"There will be many a hockey fan and winter sports athlete who attended the Lake Placid spectacle," Mr. Foster pointed out, "who will when Everett's name is mentioned, as it invariably is whenever the subject of amateur hockey is broached, immediately associate his fame with New Hampshire's

Doug has helped to put this city on the sport map and by his host of new friends, made by his Olympic contacts, created a wider appreciation on the part of outsiders for the brand of sportsmanship for which this city stands And for the type of athlete bred here." he concluded. Harkins Presents Gift

Manager George Harkins, on behalf of the Hockey club, presented Everett with a traveling bag, the gift of the local players who have teamed with Doug during the past three years since his graduation from Dartmouth, Harkins told of the thrill he received in common with other Concord listeners, when the announcer at that last game between the Canadians and the Americans, sang out: "There comes Doug Everett!"

After thanking the donors of the gift for their generosity and thoughtfulness. Doug launched into an entertaining account of a few of the things he saw and did at Lake Placid. He told of (the) 10-day training period the team went through prior to the games, and described in detail the rinks where the games were played, outdoors and indoors. the methods of coaching, paying high tribute to Coach Windsor, who since 1902 has been closely connected with amateur hockey in the United States.

Lucky Maple Leafs

Placing special emphasis on the manner in which Lady Luck smiled on the Canadians, abetted by officials of the round robin. Everett without in any way offering an alibi. claimed at least even rating for the U.S. team with Canada's Olympic entry. He described the close games in which the Dominion team barely nosed out the U.S. six for first place in the hockey event. He lauded the Germans and the Poles for their fine sporting play their skating ability and their likable personal traits.

He told of an airplane ride over the mile and half bobsled run where the sleds looked like tiny dots slipping down a narrow chute. He made the aerial trip with the father of goalie Farrell of the U.S. team. It seems Farrell's dad owns and flies a plane of his own, and with Everett on this particular ride went Coach Windsor, who never had been up in a plane before Windsor liked it. wanted to make the return trip to Boston by plane once he had gotten over the first "scare" that comes of flying in the clouds

Tells of Other Olympic Events

Everett described the gracefulness of the women figure skaters. the intricate steps the men figure skaters showed, and gently poked fun at the manner in which the 10,000 metre skating race is run. "They skate 25 laps in this event." he said, "and for the first 24 they just glide around the track, loafing, and in the final lap they really

He praised the distance and the form of the ski jumpers who provided one of the more spectacular sights at these games.

He told of the generosity Uncle Sam displayed in equipping his bockey players, "They gave us," he said, "a parade suit of white ski can and white jacket, decorated with red and blue: new hockey pads, all the sticks we wanted, sweat shirts, complete uniforms of blue with the barred U.S. shield, even to blankets and overshoes.

Displays U.S. Medals

He showed the boys the secondplace medals awarded each memher of the U.S. team, together with the Olympic medal, for participation in the games, and told of the certificate which the government sends to every man who plays on a U.S. team international competition, and which he expects to receive soon

He described in detail the differences which marked the play of the various U.S. opponents in the hockey round robin. Of Coach Windsor. he remarked that a college team probably wouldn't have got along with a man of Windsor's type, brusque, ready to condemn in no uncertain terms, not a very good mixer, but a great hockey coach. We knew he knew hockey and we knew how to take him, and so we got along great," he said.

Modest As Usual

You fellows think I'm coming back here and skate faster and better against Amesbury here Monday or at Wilton Sunday," he concluded, but although I certainly learned a lot of hockey, I'll probably be dragging along just the same." Which is

Tara Mounsey gave Concord its women's hockey.

By SANDY SMITH Monitor staff

NAGANO, Japan - The flags came tumbling over the glass from everywhere. Big flags. Tiny flags. Flags on wooden poles. Flags on little pencil sticks. And every one of those stars and stripes found a player only too happy to want it, to wave it and to wear it.

Team USA was awash in a sea of red, white and blue. And gold.

"A.J. (Mleczko) gave me the flag and that was just amazing. She was just amazing. She was like "Mounsey, the flag's all yours," said Tara Mounsey, who will be bringing a gold medal back to Concord after the United States beat Canada, 3-1, yesterday in the first Olympic women's hockey title game. "I took the flag and, oh my god, I just wrapped it around me like 'wow!' This is amazing. This is for us, but it's also for our country, family and friends."

The gold medal game couldn't quite match the intensity and sheer physicality of the 60 minutes of hockey the teams played just three days earlier - a 7-4 U.S. victory - but the 20 minutes that followed the final buzzer cannot be rivaled. It was like a flashback to 1980.

Most of these players don't remember the Miracle on Ice Fewer yet can name the player draped in the American flag after the United States won the gold medal in men's hockey. Now they're linked together in an inseparable bond.

But this was no miracle.

After losing to Canada time and again over the last decade, the U.S. finally closed the gap over the last several months. Heading into yesterday's game, the teams had gone 7-7 in their previous 14 meetings, including 13 games on the pre-Olympic tour and one in the Olympic round robin.

Those years of standing on the ice

through Canadian victory celebrations four world championships and two Pacific Rim championships - came pouring out as Team USA finally got to hear its own anthem

"When we lost the world championships in Canada last year, while we were standing there listening to their anthem, I made a pact with myself." Derry's Tricia Dunn said. If made a pact on my flag that we would win the Olympics because I don't want to hear their anthem again. Tonight when our flag was going up and they started playing the national anthem, I was like 'I did it. I made a promise and here it is.'"

Now, the U.S. has beaten Canada twice in the Olympics. First in the round robin when it didn't count, and then yesterday when everything counted

"Tve coached a lot of teams at different levels," U.S. Coach Ben Smith said. "I don't think I've ever been more moved by the efforts and dedication of the players on my team."

The U.S. took control early and never trailed, unlike Saturday when Team USA had to come back from a 4-1 deficit in the third period to win 7-4

Shelley Looney, the same player who fractured her cheek bone in the U.S.'s world championship loss last April, scored the winning goal. Ever since that loss in April, Looney had dreamed of coming back to score the winner against the Canadians

Midway through the third period. Looney turned dream into reality.

Jenny Schmidgall and Dartmouth College graduate Gretchen Ulion worked the puck back and forth low in the right corner until Ulion found Sandra Whyte open up top. Whyte unleashed a shot from between the circles and Looney was there in front for the deflection and a 2-0 lead

Canada's Danielle Goyette cut the lead in half with four minutes to play when she converted just nine seconds into a power play with Mounsey in the box for checking. But Whyte, who had drawn the ire of the Canadians three days earlier for an alleged controversial statement on the ice, scored into an open net for her third point of the night with eight seconds to play, setting off a wild celebration on the American bench

"Coach put our line back out for the last five seconds and I remember hearing them count 2. 1, then I just threw my stick and gloves in the air." Salem's Katie King said. "It's so incredible. This was our goal and we accomplished it."

Neither team scored in the first period, but the U.S. used a man advantage to start the offense in the second.

It wasn't their most electric power-play unit, but Ulion, Whyte and Sue Merz provided enough amps to light the lamp. With five seconds remaining in the power play, Merz sent the puck across the top to Whyte, who delivered it to Ulion in the right slot, where she one-timed the pass over goalie Manon Rheaume's glove for the first score of the came.

The Canadians had two power plays in the second period, but could only manage four shots. The best scoring opportunity came late in the period when Jayne Hefford got off a quick wrist shot, but Sarah Tueting, another Dartmouth grad, came up with an even quicker glove save.

Rheaume and Tueting each finished with 21 saves, but it was Tueting who upstaged the heralded professional goalie from Canada. Tueting came up with big save after big save in the third period when the Canadians tried in vain to get back in the game

"There's no question that there's a feeling of emptiness. When you've come this far on this long a journey to win a gold medal and you don't." Canadian Coach Shannon Miller said. "... The only thing I'm sorry for is that we just didn't score a little earlier in the third period, 'cause I think the floodgates would've opened."

But that wasn't likely. Not with the way Tueting and the U.S. defense was playing. This game belonged to Team USA.

"It was picture perfect, to look up there and see our flag the highest of them all, and our national anthem blaring and everyone singing it. Coach is like 'You all know the words. Get up there and sing it," "Mounsey said.

"Too many times we'd received silver. We were going gold."

ed starting pitcher worked seven innings and pick up the win in a 3-2 victory over the Milwaukee Brewers.

Later, out by the players' parking lot, Tewksbury's mom, Shirley, and his former high school coach, Dave Anderson, took their turns hugging Tewksbury and wiping away tears.

This was one story that worked out perfectly.

Joe Dudek had no real shot at the NFL, even though the Denver Broncos gave him a tryout after he graduated from Plymouth State College.

Sure, Dudek was a great tailback, relatively speaking. I watched him run at Plymouth State. and he was shifty and fast, at least against defenses in the Freedom Football Conference.

And while Dudek set NCAA records for rushing and touchdowns, Plymouth State is a Division III school, and D-III players don't play in the NFL,

Then a funny thing happened to Dudek on the way to a 9-to-5 job. NFL players went on strike, forcing teams to hire replacement players to keep the games going.

One of them was Dudek, who had work to do on the football field before he would settle into a job with a beer distributing company in Derry

He started three games at tailback for the Broncos, including one against the archrival Oakland Raiders, and reminded us of his old form as he rushed for over 100 yards.

The players on the field were far from the best available, but I'll never forget the sight of a regular Joe like Dudek, fresh from a place called Plymouth State College in central New Hampshire, romping through the Oakland Raiders' defense on a show called Monday Night Football.

1988

The best local baseball team I've ever covered was Warren Doane's 1988 version of Concord's American Legion representative, Post 21

Post 21 won the State Legion Tournament to earn a berth in the New England Regional, and there, in Bristol, Conn., showcased itself to be a balanced team with no weaknesses.

Solid defensively up the middle. Strong starting pitching. Power. Speed. These kids were good.

The affable Brady Frost, who had hands as big as a catcher's mitt, was the staff ace, backed by Seth Shurtleff, Brian Noga and John Zachodny.

The foursome of catcher Jason Wimpey, shortstop Larry Schimmoller, second baseman Jay his heroin addiction that led to his arrest.

His heroin addiction didn't bother me. Simpson was flawed, a weak and reckless individual, but so what? You knew he wouldn't intentionally hurt anyone. You knew those close to him loved him.

You also knew that he was a great player, a Pete Maravich fan who, like old Pistol Pete himself, had shaggy hair, floppy socks, a cool behind-the-back pass and a sweet jumper, all while setting the alltime scoring record at Concord High.

Simpson, though, couldn't shake his addictive demons and appetite for fun. He'd been given opportunities to clean himself up, but the temptations often proved too strong.

What a shame it was, I thought after leaving the jail, that a person with such a big heart had crossed so far over the line.

Former Boston Red Sox pitcher Bill Monbouquette made me forget about war, at least temporarily.

Monbouquette was a special guest at the old Red Blazer restaurant to help promote The Sox Exchange, a Florida fantasy camp in which adults can play ball with former Sox players.

Monbouquette spoke about his career, which ran from 1958-68. He had a 114-112 career record and is the answer to a popular trivia question among baseball fans in this area:

Who was the last Red Sox pitcher to throw a nohitter? Right, on Aug. 1, 1962. Monbouquette won 20 games the next season. He was a pretty good cot. pitcher.

As Monbouquette talked about his career, a CNN broadcast, emitting from over the bar, gave us some sobering news: "The liberation of Kuwait has begun," White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater told us

The Gulf War was on.

The Blazer crowd turned its attention from baseball to war, then back to baseball when it was time to choose the winner of The Sox Exchange draw-

Later, I finished my interview with Monbouquette and headed to the parking lot. Baseball had served its purpose. I had been distracted from the harshness of the real world, at least for a few minumpires. No All-Star teams, standings or roundup items to phone in to the local paper.

Just baseball. Just play the game.

Bendiks and two other adults monitored things, but the kids were basically on their own. They made their own rules, chose their own teams set their own lineups.

This is a lost institution, I thought as I watched on a perfect summer night. Pick-up ball. Whatever happened to it? Why did kids need a perfectly chalked foul line to play baseball?

It brought me back, some 20 years, when sandlot ball was as common as waking up. We did it ourselves, every night, late June through late August.

Moms, dads, coaches and clipboards weren't welcome.

And what a lineup we had, a real Murderers' Row. Juice, lefty, Murph. P.T., Baker.

And, of course, the best hitter in the bunch. A kid named Duck.

1994

Brady Frost had it made.

The pay wasn't great, just $850 per month, but Frost was a professional pitcher for the Vermont Expos, a Class A NY-Penn League farm team for the Montreal Expos.

Homes games were played at Centennial Field in Burlington, a city with charm, culture and the famed sea serpent, Champ, who lived in nearby Lake Champlain and doubled as the Expos' mas-

Frost, a 6-foot-2, 215-pound middle reliever, didn't pitch on this warm, still night. But he got to the park early, like he did every night back then. He loved the camaraderie, the feeling of being part of a team, the sight of the closely cropped green grass and the lights burning hard as the setting sun gave the sky a pink glow

He loved putting on a baseball uniform instead of a suit and tie. He loved the fact that as a University of Vermont graduate and a native of a neighboring state, he was the closest thing to a local player the Vermont Expos had.

So Frost, a big teddy bear with no real shot at the big leagues, went to work each night with a smile. He signed autographs, watched Champ dance with children on top of the Expos' dugout and played baseball for a living.

Not a bad life. Not bad at all.

.1997.

The letter from Pembroke's Mya Mangawang stunned me. After two years of public silence, Mangawang wanted to talk about the suicide of star athlete Sarah Devens.

They were roommates and best friends at Dartmouth College. Mangawang was the Ivy League Player of the Year in soccer, Devens an All-America player in field hockey and lacrosse.

But while Devens seemed to have it all, something was terribly wrong. She shot herself to death in her father's house in Essex, Mass., leaving Mangawang to wonder why. She had had no clue what was coming

Two years later, Mangawang, still searching for answers, decided to use Devens's death to create some good. She wanted young people to realize that sports and sports accolades needed to be put in their proper place, that young people needed to prioritize elements in their lives, and that pushing too hard to excel and please everybody wasn't the way

So Mangawang wrote and asked to talk to me, hoping to spread her message. I drove to Burlington. Vt., where she was a graduate student at the University of Vermont, and met her at a downtown restaurant for coffee.

Mangawang poured out her feelings on her best friend, a young woman who obviously had lost perspective along the way. She cried, laughed and struggled to find the right words, struggled to make sense of it all, struggled to not blame herself for not detecting her friend's unhappiness sooner.

But while Mangwang fought to express herself on a subject that had kept her up for many nights, her goal was crystal clear: she wanted young people to realize their self worth.

And sports, Mangawang knew, had nothing to do with that.

1998

Red Eastman gave everything he had to the Sunset Baseball League, one of Concord's oldest traditions and, legend has it, the oldest after supper baseball league in the country.

Born in 1909, the Sunset League provided an outlet for many great local ballplayers through the years. During the 1930s and '40s, in fact, it was the biggest game in town, attracting a thousand or more fans to White Park.

Eastman became league president in 1950 and ran the league as though his own son was on a roster for the next 40 years. He died in 1994 at the age of 87, and now, on this late spring evening, the

Solid defensively up the middle. Strong starting pitching. Power. Speed. These kids were good.

The affable Brady Frost, who had hands as big as a catcher's mitt, was the staff ace, backed by Seth Shurtleff, Brian Noga and John Zachodny.

The foursome of catcher Jason Wimpey, shortstop Larry Schimmoller, second baseman Jay (Rogie) Vachon and center fielder Kevin McCabe were fundamentally sound and very cool under pressure. And in the middle of the order stood first baseman Adam Jones, a left-handed hitter with oak trees for arms.

Unfortunately for Post 21, a team from Kingston, N.Y., was just a little bit better. The New Yorkers featured a shortstop named Mark Grappuso, who later would hit more home runs in a season than Seton Hall teammates Craig Biggio, John Valentin and Mo Vaughn.

The two teams dominated everyone in the tournament, except each other. New York took both games, 2-1 in 10 innings, and then 1-0, to reach the World Series.

In the second meeting, Jones flew out to right field with the tying run on second to end the game.

It also ended the thrill of watching two great baseball teams play mistake-free ball, two teams that walked off the field with mutual respect for one another.

·1989·

The Merrimack Valley High boys' basketball team, featuring the three-pronged attack of Scott Drapeau, Dave Huckins and Paul Dean, had absolutely no chance of winning the Class I state title.

Not with Huckins, a sweet-shooting forward, sitting on the bench with a sprained left ankle, and not with ConVal holding a 47-29 lead with 3:45 left in the third quarter.

Repeat, an 18-point lead late in the third quarter.

No one at packed Lundholm Gymnasium will forget what happened next. With Huckins waving a towel from the bench, Drapeau and Dean led the Indians on a come back for the ages, which culminated with the sleepy-eyed Dean's eight-foot lane jumper and two foul shots in the final 10 seconds.

MV, 57-54. The biggest sports miracle 1 ever witnessed in person.

1990

I liked Champ Simpson right away.

I met him at the Merrimack County Jail to write about his basketball career at Concord High and

1992

The call came to the newsroom one spring afternoon. The John Stark Regional High junior varsity baseball team had forfeited to Hopkinton High for a cause, a real special cause.

As I made phone calls and later went to Weare to watch Stark play a baseball game, I knew I had an amazing story, a story about a young man with more guts and courage than I had ever seen.

His name was Jason Burgess, and he was the backup second baseman for Stark junior varsity Coach Chic Hamel. Burgess, a 15-year-old freshman, had cerebral palsy. The lower part of his legs, abnormally short, couldn't support him and his feet were undersized.

Still, Burgess played baseball for Hamel, the perfect man for this ground-breaking process. A short, round, fiery man, Hamel treated everyone the same, sprinkling instruction with wisecracks and jabs designed to keep his players loose and alert.

Hamel welcomed Burgess to his team. When Hamel sent Burgess in as a late-inning replacement, Burgess crawled to home plate, holding the bat like a baby holds a rattle. He'd rise at the plate and bat from his knees.

Defense? No problem. A teammate simply used a wheelchair to wheel Burgess to his spot at second base.

Things unraveled a bit one day when an umpire refused to allow Burgess to bat, fearing injury and liability issues. Hamel, loyal as lassie, lied to the ump. telling him that he'd received permission from the NHIAA to allow Burgess on the team.

It didn't work, though. Burgess couldn't come to bat, and Stark, in an amazing show of camaraderic, forfeited the game to Hopkinton.

Rules were later introduced to address such issues and Burgess was allowed back on the team.

It's a story that comes around once in a lifetime. Jason Burgess.

Toughest ballplayer I ever met.

1993

The simplest things are often the best.

Brian Bendiks, a Concord National Pony League coach and high school teacher in Gilford, understood this. That's why Bendiks organized pickup baseball for kids 8-10 years old.

Monday and Wednesday nights at Rundlett Junior High. No uniforms. No scorebooks. No and played baseball for a living.

Not a bad life. Not bad at all.

1995

Irene Hart loved her Red Sox. Always had, dating back to the days when Babe Ruth pitched for them and the Sunset League was a big attraction at White Park.

Hart, 97, lived at the Odd Fellows Home. A Red Sox schedule was tacked on a bulletin board, and the Red Sox radio station was marked on her dial in heavy black marker because Hart couldn't see real well.

Her hearing was fine, though, her thoughts sharp and focused, her love for the Sox evident. Jose Canseco was her favorite player.

The Sox were chugging toward the American League East title that fall, and Hart was fired up and looking forward to the playoffs.

She shared her recollections of Ruth and Ted Williams and Yaz, and relayed stories of when she sat on a steep hill watching Sunset League games, her heels digging into the ground to keep her stationary above the field.

When baseball was the topic, Hart was a little kid at Fenway Park, eating a hot dog and keeping score.

She was a true fan.

1996

Matt Smith, one of the best guards Bill Haubrich ever had at Concord High, couldn't eatch a break when it came to college basketball.

Too bad, because the kid, spunky and quick, energized a team as soon as he stepped on the court.

He didn't step on it enough, though. He transferred from Brown University to UNH and had to sit out a season under NCAA guidelines. He tore a knee ligament the next season in practice and missed half that season and another half of this one. Rown to !

Then real tragedy struck. On his way back to Durham from the NHL All-Star Game at the Fleet-Center in Boston, Smith fell asleep at the wheel and crashed on Interstate 95. He suffered head, hand and internal injuries. He was in critical condition.

Basketball suddenly seemed so minor, so trivial.

Thankfully Smith made a full recovery, but his college basketball career ended that cold night on Rte. 95, a college career that never quite got off the years. During the 1930s and '40s, in fact, it was the biggest game in town, attracting a thousand or more fans to White Park.

Eastman became league president in 1950 and ran the league as though his own son was on a roster for the next 40 years. He died in 1994 at the age of 87, and now, on this late spring evening, the baseball field at White Park was officially named Red Eastman Field.

It was a modest ceremony, with a few fans in the bleachers, a team lining the third-base line and another lining the first-base line, and some kind words at home plate from a few people who cared about Eastman, including his son, Paul.

As the tribute moved on, kids maybe three-feet tall played baseball at a field across the parking lot from Eastman Field.

They were kids who no doubt would one day know about a man named Red Eastman, father of the Sunset League for such a long, long time.

.1999.

In a fairy-tale that matched Tewksbury's pitching debut 13 years before, Anna McDougal hit her jump shot on the very first try.

McDougal was a member of the Winnisquam Regional junior varsity girls' basketball team for three seasons. Down's syndrome couldn't stop her from playing high school ball.

But what about varsity? At least that's what Winnisquam varsity coach Ryan Adams wondered. So he decided to incorporate McDougal into Seniors' Night, when varsity players were honored during their final home game.

The plan, pre-arranged by Adams and Newfound Regional Coach Larry Gibson but unbeknown to McDougal, was for Newfound to win the tap, score and then lay back a little so Anna could shoot and tie the score.

And on this night last winter, the plan worked to perfection.

Point guard Cami Pucci shoveled the ball to McDougal on the left side of the lane, tight to the basket.

McDougal then turned and shot a little two-hander that landed softly through the net. The Winnisquam gym erupted and the game was stopped. McDougal received a basketball signed by all junior varsity and varsity players and coaches.

McDougal cried and thanked everyone involved, and, later, the cold night air in the middle of a New Hampshire winter suddenly didn't seem so harsh.

Wise messages for the new century

Dear Readers: My New Year's column has become an annual tradition. These New Year's resolutions are based on the original credo of Al-Anon. I am using its theme with some variations of my own.

· Just for today, I will live through this day only, and not set far-reaching goals to try to overcome all my problems at once. I know I can do something for 24 hours that would overwhelm me if I thought I had to keep it up for a lifetime.

· Just for today, I will be happy. Abraham Lincoln said, "Most folks are about as happy as they make up their minds to be." He was right. I will not dwell on thoughts that depress me. I will chase them out of my mind and replace them with happy thoughts.

· Just for today, I will adjust myself to what is. I will face reality. I will correct those things that I can correct and accept those I cannot.

· Just for today, I will improve my mind. I will not be a mental loafer. I will force myself to read something that requires effort, thought and concentra-

· Just for today, I will do something positive to improve my health. If I'm a smoker, I'll make an honest effort to quit. If I'm overweight, I'll eat nothing I know to be fattening. And I will force myself to exercise - even if it's only walking around the block or using the stairs instead of the elevator.

· Just for today, I will make a conscious effort to be agreeable. I will look as good as I can, dress becomingly, speak softly, act courteously and not interrupt when someone else is talking. Just for today, I'll try not to improve anybody except myself.

· We know so much more about nutrition and how much exercise and sensible living can extend life and make it more enjoyable; so just for today, I'll take good care of my body so I can celebrate many more happy new years.

gram. I may not follow it exactly, but I will have it, thereby saving myself from two pests: hurry and indecision. . Just for today. I will gather the

And as we begin this bright, shiny new century, consider these "Thoughts for the Day" by Sri Sathya Sai Baba:

"If there is righteousness in the heart, there will be beauty in the character. 'If there be beauty in the character, there will be harmony in the home. If there is harmony in the home, there will be order in the nation.

"When there is order in the nation. Just for today, I will have a pro-there will be peace in the world."

In the news

Welcoming the century

n the spirit of the new millennium, three local churches will forgo their individual services tomorrow morning and meet together as one body

Members of Grace Capital Church, First Church of the Nazarene and New Life Fellowship will meet at the Concord City Auditorium for drama, multi-media presentations and preaching. The focus of the celebration is hope for the new century from the gospel.

The idea began four or five months ago when the Rev Kevin Hardy of the First Church started thinking about ways to mark the "the first Sunday of the first year of the first century in a new millennium."

Over the last 10 or 20 years, there have been scandals involving televangelists, which has turned some people off organized religion, Hardy said "But we cannot let people be turned off Christ in the midst of all that," he said

Holding a service with two or three other churches in a large venue seemed to be a way to celebrate the hope of the new century by focusing on Jesus, not doctrinal differences, he said

The Rev. Peter Bonanno of Grace Capital said: "Without unity in the church, there is no moving forward."

Three churches taking part in the service haven't been critical of each other but there has been an air of "exclusivity." he said. When denominations are at odds with each other, it gives a black eye to the values Jesus stood for.

Just preparing for the joint service has broken down some barriers as members saw their similarities and the differences seemed to melt away

So far, Bonanno has not been able to find the last time such a gathering has occurred in the city

"This is just the beginning," he added. The service will start at 10:30 a.m. on Sunday at the Concord City Auditorium. All are welcome.

Surprise offering

Dick Pendleton put his $6 envelope into the offering plate each Sunday. In his later years, he volunteered to play clarinet at the Calvary Lutheran Church in Minneapolis.

The size of the gift is just becoming known, but it's somewhere above $2 million.

The church, which has had trouble meeting expenses, is still deciding what to do with the money that grew from securities. Pendleton had inherited from his parents.

By the time he offered to lend his talents to the church, he had been playing clarinet and saxophone for more than a half-century - through high school, college and World War II

And his church performances were memorable Music director Nancy Grover recalled his showing up at a Saturday meeting. He had no music but detailed ideas about how they should play a clarinet-piano duet of "Just a Closer Walk With Thee." His jaw-dropping Sunday performance led to several more.

"He was just amazing," Grover said. "It was a hoot."

For the 59-year-old Moser, whose engravings have illustrated such classics as Moby Dick. ## 1999 was a year that tested faith - from Colorado to Kosovo

Columbine shooting was top religion story last year

By TERRY MATTINGLY Scripps Howard News Service

Moments before the fateful lunch break, a Columbine High School classmate saw Rachel Joy Scott drawing in one of her spiral-bound journals

It was a pencil sketch of a rose, which her family believes was meant to symbolize youth. The poet, dancer, musician and missionary also drew two eves - weeping 13 tears onto the rose. Police found the journal in her bloody, bullet-pierced back-

Why 13 tears? Scott's journal ended with this prayer. "Am I the only one who sees? Am I the only one who craves Your glory? Am I the only one who longs to be forever in Your loving arms? All I want is for someone to walk with me through these halls of a tracedy."

There were many important religion news stories this year, from Kosovo to Kansas. But it was Columbine's shattering images of evil, faith, violence and courage that dominated 1999, inspiring fierce debates about whether America's soul is twisted. The massacre followed a bloody stream of school violence and preceded the slaughter of seven worshippers in Wedgwood Baptist Church in Fort Worth,

Was Columbine a clash between pietistic believers and bitter acolytes for a media-fueled youth culture, or a cautionary tale about tolerance and guns? My answer is "all of the above." and Columbine tops my list of the top 10 religion news stories of the year.

In an April 20, 1998, journal entry - precisely one year before the tragedy - Scott wrote: "I have no more personal friends at school. But you know what? . . . I am not going to apologize for speaking the name

A crane looms over the skeleton of the $69.6 million Cathedral of Our Lady of the Angels under construction in Los Angeles

Cathedral complex sparks controversy

Critics say it's not 'Catholic' enough

By LOUINN LOTA The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES - Our Lady of the Angels, at $69.6 million the nation's most expensive Catholic cathedral, brings together a worldrenowned Spanish architect and three California artists for a mission: to make a monument that would last 500 years.

But the yet-unfinished cathedral with its geometric shapes, sharp soaring angles and simple and stark concrete facade - has critics describing it as detached and aloof, more akin to a courthouse than a cathedral

Some say it's not Catholic enough for the church.

What does the building say of the Catholic faith and the Catholic building tradition? Sadly, not as much as it could," said Steven Schloeder, whose Berkeley architectural firm, Liturgical Environs, has church projects nationwide

Being built on a 5.6-acre site downtown, the cathedral replaces St. Vibiana's Cathedral, the Spanish Baroque-style structure built in 1876 that was severely damaged by the 1994 Northridge earthquake and condemned

The Rev. Richard Vosko, a priest, architect and furniture designer hired by the Los Angeles Archdiocese as a consultant, defends the project from another perspective: He says no single design is certifiably Catholic

The Roman Catholic Church has never adopted one particular style of art or architecture," said the 55-year-old Vosko.

The huge cathedral complex, with a bell tower, housing and a plaza will cost $163.2 million. The cathedral building will be completed in late 2001 or early 2002

In their pre-rampage videotapes. Eric Harris and Dylan Klebold discussed - in their litany of hate - how they wanted to start a "religious war" and mocked a girl named Rachel who had shared her Christian faith

In audio tapes aired on CNN, and transcripts released by parents. Klebold said: "What would Jesus do? What would I DO? (Makes shotgun sound at camera)

Yet Columbine insiders know it could have been much worse, said the Rev. Bruce Porter, who preached at Scott's funeral. They also know that Harris and Klebold were not uniquely wicked villains. but bright young men who managed to hide their rage. This could have happened anywhere.

"We want to know: How could these students have done these evil acts? Where did this rage come from? It looked like these students had every advantage in life, or at least they had everything that our world considers an advantage in life," said Porter, "All of this just exploded on us. . . . Columbine has become the Pearl Harbor of the culture wars.

· 2. Secular Serbs clash with secular Albanians in Kosovo, while diplomats ignore the peace efforts of all faith groups. NATO bombs Serbia during Holy Week and on Pascha (Easter).

· 3. China arrests 35,000-plus members of the banned Falun Gong spiritual movement, while continuing the crackdown on underground Protestants Catholies

· 4. President Clinton is impeached but not convicted in a riveting showdown between the religious right and the lifestyle left. His ultimate defense is that he could not have committed perjury because of his biblical interpretation of what is and what is not

• 5 The Kansas State Board of Education shelves mandatory tests covering Darwin's theory of macroevolution and allows teachers to cover controversies linked to Darwinian philosophy. The "intelligent design" approach to creation issues continues to rise

• 6. A coalition of Protestants and Catholics begins governing Northern Ireland.

• 7. Is evangelism hate speech? The Southern Baptist Convention is attacked for efforts to convert Jews. Muslims and Hindus. Pope John Paul II visits India, stressing that "there can be no true evangelization without the explicit proclamation of Jesus as Lord.

. 8. U.S. Catholic bishops pass guidelines enforcing the pope's "Ex corde Ecclesiae (From the Heart of the Church)," a philosophical map for life on 235 college campuses.

. 9. Texas Gov. George W. Bush's sermons at Second Baptist Church in Houston trigger a rush of spiritual testimonies, and calls for 'faith-based" social work, by White House wannabes.

space filled with natural light. A 3-foot-long model biplane dangles from the ceiling. Tucked among platoons of art books, art supplies and files, Cara Moser functions as her father's administrative assistant.

Ask Moser a question about his past, and he will talk your ear off. This self described "bornagain Yankee" was raised in Chattanooga in a family of bigots who hated Jews and Catholics almost as much as blacks. "The incessant lan-guage of hatred" that he imbibed was the main reason he eventually left the South.

What led the adolescent Moser to Christ was girls. For how else was a cadet at an all-male military school in the 1950s going to meet girls but at church? The Methodist Youth Fellowship, which started out as his dating service, before long became the means of his conversion.

What solidified his faith, however, was a hunting accident on New Year's Eve in 1958. He and his older brother. Tom, were out crow hunting when another youth mistook Tom's crow call for the real thing. He fired toward them, narrowly Moser interpreted the near-miss as a call from God to join the ministry. So he became a licensed student preacher (not yet ordained), serving during his college years as an assistant at small Methodist churches in Tennessee and Georgia.

Unlike more liberal, northern Methodism, Moser's Bible Belt variety "flirted with funda-mentalism." The Good Book, he believed, was without error. By his senior year, though, everything changed. He had lost his faith and would not be going to Vanderbilt Divinity School after took place at a church where he was in charge of the youth group. When the board of trustees learned that a teenage member was pregnant, they declared her persona non grata.

"I couldn't quite reconcile that with my read ing of the gospels," Moser says. "Here you've got a guy who founded this particular faith who kept company with whores and tax collectors and all kinds of riff-raff that these good people wouldn't allow in their church.

By this time, Moser was finishing up a degree in art education at the University of Chattanooga. So instead of studying for the Methodist ministry, he taught for five years at a high school in his hometown. In 1967, he left the South and and has lived in Massachusetts ever since

Teaching art at Williston, a prep school in Easthampton, Mass., brought Moser in touch with the man whose art he had long admired, the man who would become his mentor. Leonard Baskin, who lived nearby, is a renowned sculptor and printmaker

Founded in 1962, Baskin's Gehenna Press was a model of exquisite, high-end bookmaking. Its publications ranged from Melville's Encantadas to the works of Shakespeare. Type was sometimes set in fascinating geometric shapes.

The gruff, no-nonsense Baskin took on the younger man for an informal apprenticeship. Moser also spent a year studying printmaking at the University of Massachusetts. The fruit of his labors was the establishment of his own Pennyroyal Press, whose acclaimed books are now in the collections of the Metropolitan Museum of Art, the National Gallery of Art and the rare book rooms of Harvard, Yale and Princeton.

In tone, Moser's prints rival his mentor's in somberness. But in a dual career, as an illustrator of more than 50 children's books, the artist expresses a sunnier side of his personality. His watercolors light up the likes of Little Tricker the Sauirrel Meets Big Double the Bear

The Pennyroyal Caxton Bible is the result of Bruce Kovner's generous patronage. A New York investment banker and bibliophile, Kovner funded the project at $2 million, without impinging, Moser insists, on the artist's freedom, Moser assembled a distinguished group of advisers, including a poet, a Hebrew scholar, professors of religion and literature, and bibliographic curators. He hired experts in typography, letter-carying and printing

Moser's engraving medium for the approximately 235 illustrations he executed is called Resingrave, made of ultra-hard polymer resin This is a modern invention born recently, as the wood engraver's classic medium of choice, boxwood, has become rare and prohibitively expen-

Given that the subject matter of much Western art up through the 17th century is derived from the Old or New Testaments, the cultural baggage for the artist is overwhelming. How to make it new

For Moser, so high a hurdle did not seem insurmountable: "I've had that baggage with practically every classic book I've ever done. Alice in Wonderland probably more so than any of them because of the work of John Tenniel."

But none, Moser grants, more so than the Bible. Nonetheless, he fearlessly resolved not to be intimidated by the past. He would go his own way. The Pennyroyal Caxton is the splendid

How to place an ad:

1. Write your ad. Call 224-7777 for assistance from our Classified Services representatives or use the coupon below to write it yourself*. Allow 22 characters and spaces for every line. Only standard abbreviations are accepted. TIP: Begin with a key word (whatit-is). This helps readers find your ad easily

Describe your item include any useful or featured information

State your price and let them know 4. Estimate the cost of your ad: if you would consider an offer. Include your phone number and when it is convenient to reach you. 2. Determine the classification of your ad using the

Classified Index or take advantage of our prepaid specials by checking the approprinumber of days it is to run. See the deadlines below

Days x Lines x Rate = Cost Multiply the days run by the number of lines, then multiply by the cost per line to find the total. If you are taking advantage of our prepaid specials, fill in the amount enclosed in the space provided.

5. Fill in your Customer Information. This information is > necessary for billing 6. Check your ad the first day of publication for accuracy, and call us with any changes. The Concord Monitor will be responsible for errors only for the first insertion to the extent of a refund or credit, and assumes no responsibility for ads accidentally omitted.

TIP: Be sure to make a note of the 3-digit cancellation number given to you when you call.

PUBLIC NOTICE in 1986, Congress passed the Ashestos Hazard Emergency

Response Act (AHERA) In response to this law. Bow School District buildings were inspected to identify any asbestos building mate rials. The law further requires the development of a Management Plan, based upon the findings of that nspection. The Bow School District is required to natify the public of the availability of the AHERA Plan, which identifies areas having aspestos containing materials and how these materials are being maintained in a safe manner. A capy of the Management Plan is on file for review at School Administrative Unit #67, 32 White Rock Hill Road, Bow, N.H. 03304 Copies of the individual building inspection reports are on file in the office of the Head Custodian in the Elementary School. ## Seinfeld a hit in Catskills

A not-so-funny thing hap-pened to Jerry Seinfeld on his way to the Catskills.

The comedian was involved in a minor collision when a driver merged onto a mountain road apparently without seeing Seinfeld's car, state troopers

No one was injured in Thursday's crash - about 30 miles south of Albany - and no tickets were issued.

Puffy's troubles grow

A Brooklyn man has filed a $100 million lawsuit against Sean "Puffy" Combs, accusing the rapper of assaulting him in a shooting at a Times Square dance club.

The plaintiff, Julius Jones, 27, was one of three bystanders wounded by gunfire early Monday at Club New York, authorities said. Jones was briefly hospitalized with a shoulder injury.

On Thursday, Combs's attorney, Harvey Slovis, called the lawsuit "frivolous and without merit."

Combs was arrested on a weapons charge after police found another gun in a car which had taken him and his girlfriend, actress-singer Jennifer Lopez, away from the club.

He has denied any wrongdoing.

Another rapper, Shyne, whose real name is Jamal Barrow, has been charged with three counts of attempted murder in connection with the

A tenor to remember

Part-time daycare teacher Heather McPherson got a phone call at work from a man she'd met years ago - and it was music to her ears

Italian tenor Placido Domingo, apparently impressed by a chance meeting with McPherson in 1994 during which she sang a couple of songs for him, decided to track her down Wednesday prior to his performance in "The Three Tenors" concert at the San Jose (Calif.) Arena.

It took Domingo three calls to contact McPherson at the Pacific Gas & Electric child care center, where awestruck co-workers took turns passing the phone just to hear his voice.

Domingo left McPherson a backstage pass to his concert, and McPherson said it was "amazing"

'That was the best way to end the year," she

Phish can really stop traffic

A Miami concert by rock band Phish reeled in tens of thousands of fans who clogged a major highway for two days just to get to the perfor-

The state highway patrol said traffic along Interstate 75 was finally flowing freely in both directions at 7 p.m. Thursday, about three hours after the group was scheduled to begin its two-day outdoor performance at Big Cypress Seminole Indian Reservation.

Traffic had been a nightmare since Wednesday, when 75,000 spectators began clogging Alligator Alley, the east-west highway that connects Miami and Fort Lauderdale on Florida's east coast to the state's Gulf Coast.

One concertgoer died in Wednesday's traffic jam after he fell off the hood of a motor home and was run over by another vehicle.

Dear Beth: I'm 12 years old and I'm not really close to anyone. Me and my mother aren't even near close. I have two good friends at school, but they don't really know me at all. I'm confused about every single aspect of life and I don't have anyone to talk it out with. I tried talking to my school counselor last year, but I just couldn't. Is there some number I can call that'll help

- Please Help

I am so sorry you feel so alone. I hear from too many young people who feel like you do. It shouldn't be this way. But you show great strength by writing for help. Tell your mother you want to be closer. If she doesn't respond, reach out to adults you know, including relatives, to say how you feel If you can't find any.

Your letter got me thinking about this millennial new year. So many of you have written over the years, and the problems have gotten more complex and painful: Young people are confused about sex, about STDs and AIDS, drugs, eating disorders, bullies, guns and violence, and more. Adults write: "What's happened since I was young?" "Society is happen through technology or sophisticated innovations. It will happen through a commitment to small, simple and frequent "acts of kindness": kindness to our families, to our friends and classmates, to our fellow workers, our teachers, communities, to those less fortunate and to our earth.

Let's reflect and talk honestly with each other this New Year's. Let's ask: "What concerns me, and how can I help?"

My wish is that every one of us, young and old, will mentor a child, help a family in need or personally work with the many great programs that help people and the environment

'Firing Line' ends its 33-year run

By DAVID DALEY The Hartford Courant

After William F. Buckley finished taping the final episode of Firing Line's 33-year run, and after the influential conservative intellectual received a champagne toast from liberal sparring part-ners Michael Kinsley and Mark Green, he sat for an exit interview with Nightline host Ted Koppel. For his last question, Koppel asked Buckley about the show's influence: "We have 10 seconds left. Could you sum up in 10 seconds?"

"No," Buckley politely replied. As usual, Buckley's right. The enormous impact of Buckley and Firing Line as the forefather of today's ever-expanding political talk show circuit couldn't possibly be summed up in an easy sound bite and squeezed in before a commercial. Even if it could, the grandiloquent Buckley - whose portentous vocabulary makes William Safire look like a mere savage - would probably be the wrong person to ask.

Buckley, 74, might not be proud of the children Firing Line spawned, with John McLaughlin jumping down Eleanor Clift's throat every week and even an interviewer as sophisticated and skilled as Koppel reduced to asking one of the architects of modern conservatism to encapsulate his role in 10 seconds.

Nevertheless, it was Buckley and Firing Line that initiated TV politics as a bare-knuckled brawl. Buckley's famous fracases with Gore Vidal on ABC taught news producers the dramatic value of pitting ideological opposites against each other and letting them scrap it out. In one of their first debates in 1963, Buckley called Vidal a "philosophical degenerate." Five years later, on live TV, he threatened Vidal, "Now listen, you queer, stop calling me a crypto-Nazi or I'll sock you in the goddamn face.

But otherwise, over four decades of unhurried argument, Firing Line has proved that television can bring as much light as heat to political debate. Buckley decided to end Firing Line with the new millennium, with retrospectives airing this month on many PBS stations.

Firing Line had no commercial breaks and no aggressively confrontational theme music. Instead, there was civilized conversation. and every leading leftist from the '60s onward - whether Noam Chomsky, Allen Ginsberg or Jesse Jackson - came to consider Firing Line an essential pit stop, both for the sophistication of the debate and the thrill of testing their own debate skills against Buckley.

That was the appeal and the disappeal," quipped Kinsley, a ting Buckley against well-known liberals and left-leaning celebrities, Firing Line made the National Review editor a household name, a recurring caricature on Saturday Night Live, a punch line in Woody Allen films and Johnny Carson monologues, and according to a Psychology Today survey, the '70s most unlikely sex symbol.

All that helped provide conservatism with a charming, witty face at a time it needed it most. Firing Line debuted in 1966, when conservatives were most associated with the discredited Communist baiting of Sen. Joseph McCarthy or the harsh-sounding rhetoric of Sen. Barry Goldwater that voters rejected in President Johnson's 1964 landslide. Buckley's magazine, National Review, is often given credit for fostering the thinkers that created the conservative revolution which held the White House for all but the Carter years between 1968 and 1992. "He purged out the crank elements," Kinsley said. "Now in my view there's still a lot. But he got rid of the anti-Semites and the isolationists for a long time."

Then the TV show - in the precable days when their were far fewer viewing choices - took his ideas from Washington think tanks and into the living rooms of regular Americans.

"It wasn't anything that different for me," Buckley said, in a recent interview. "I'd been doing National Review and articulating the conservative position for almost 10 years. But there was a lot that had been said by National Review that needed to be espoused face-to-face to its critics on the other side. I can't give you names, addresses and serial numbers of those who converted, but there's been some evidence people were influenced by it."

One Buckley biographer suggests that's a rare moment of mod-tor at work on a Buckley book Before Buckley went on television, Americans hadn't seen many articulate, quick-witted, erudite conservatives. Conservatism was still pretty much represented in the public mind by McCarthy, Goldwater, or fringe figures from the John Birch Society.

Said Tanenhaus, "Buckley provided conservatism with a completely new public persona. He brought style, elegance and seriousness to their position. He was able to do that on television even more so than in his writing."

As John Judis noted in his 1988 biography William F. Buckley Jr.: Patron Saint of the Conservatives. Buckley was among the first conservatives to take advantage of television by combining ideas and charisma to drive the political debate.

"First with his race for mayor of New York in 1964, and then with Firing Line, Buckley brought people in contact with a conservatism that wasn't judgmental. He showed that a conservative could be witty and also hold his own against the bastions of liberalism," Judis said. "Firing Line was interesting because it was part of the debate The arguments seemed to matter more then.

"They were completely unlike the debates you see today, except maybe Crossfire. Even on Crossfire, you've got five minutes of debate, then commercials, and four people shouting . . . on stage. It was much better to have Buckley and Ron Dellums go for an hour on the Vietnam War.
